Dear Laurie,

On behalf of the California State Library, I am pleased to submit this 5-year evaluation report for the time period 2006/07 – 2010/11. Over these five fiscal years, the California State Library provided $83,696,236 in Library Services and Technology Act (LSTA) awards, through 1,077 grants, to 200 different library organizations. We accomplished this enormous effort through ongoing statewide projects, targeted projects in developmental areas, and competitive grants to support local initiatives and exciting new library innovations.

This evaluation of the use of LSTA funds demonstrates the effectiveness of our efforts in assisting with the library-related needs and priorities of the people of California. Moreover, these findings not only serve as an evaluation but also will serve as an important tool as we finalize and compile the next 5-year plan. We at the California State Library look forward to building on our successes with this program over the next five years.

Kindest Regards,

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Background and Methodology

The California State Library (CSL) commissioned an evaluative study of the prior five years of the use of Library Services and Technology Act (LSTA) funding in California for the fiscal years 2006/2007 – 2010/2011, based on the applicable federal legislative requirement. The evaluation study was conducted by an independent consultant, chosen based on the consultant's demonstrated expertise in program evaluation and knowledge of LSTA. The evaluation is intended to allow CSL to measure progress in meeting the targets set out in its approved five year plan and to assist in making effective resource allocation decisions in its upcoming five year plan.

The years covered by the study are from FY 2006/07 through FY 2010/11, while the CSL LSTA Five Year Plan covers the years 2008-2012, as required by IMLS. In reviewing the availability of useful data, the decision was agreed upon by the consultant and CSL, with input from IMLS, to utilize these specific five years for the study since the most complete data was available for these years, including all required reports.

The study included an exhaustive review and analysis of the reports, data and evaluative studies relating to the various grant projects. Quantitative data was analyzed for both meaningful and statistically significant results. Qualitative and anecdotal data, including that gathered through stakeholder interviews, focus groups, and an online survey, was reviewed for common themes and causal relationships. The evaluative metrics were linked to the specific Outputs and Outcomes included in the CSL LSTA Five Year Plan by Goal and Program. The study is organized by IMLS Priority and then under each Priority, by the applicable CSL LSTA Plan Goal, Program and metrics.

Five Year Overview

Over the five fiscal years covered by the study, the California State Library provided $83,696,236 in Library Services and Technology Act awards, through 1,077 grants, to 200 different library organizations.

CSL has historically balanced the use of LSTA funds among ongoing statewide projects, targeted projects in developmental areas, and competitive grants which support local initiatives and serve as the R&D tool for exciting new library innovations. For the competitive grants category, which focuses primarily on individual libraries, one significant change by CSL in FY 2009/10 was the development and implementation of the innovative "Pitch An Idea" process. "Pitch An Idea" has resulted in a significant positive change in the number and type of grants awarded.

A significant amount of online content has been created by various grant projects, such as Transforming Life After 50 (TLA50), Early Learning with Families (ELF), and Get Involved, all of which is available to any interested library, including curriculum and replicable resources.

Performance Metrics and Outcome Based Evaluation

Each of the 12 Programs in the CSL LSTA Five Year Plan includes specific Output and Outcome metrics. While some of the grant projects were able to link closely to such metrics, there was not a clear, systemic effort to gather data related to all such metrics. Starting in FY 2009/10, CSL revised both its application and reporting methodologies for LSTA grants, and effectively included more requirements for performance metrics. A key issue which hindered the ability to create and gather effective performance metrics, whether Outcome Based Evaluation (OBE) or not, was the compacted time frame for many grant projects.

CSL has invested significant time, money and attention in developing capacity in the California library community to understand and effectively utilize Outcome Based Evaluation (OBE). Over the five year period of the study, 194 grants were used to provide data for OBE, representing 18% of all grants, with a significant majority of such grants in the last three fiscal years. However, library community interest in and understanding of OBE remains mixed. The development of the Eureka Leadership grants, and the Pitch An Idea competitive grant process, both of which included OBE elements for many projects, helped increase the understanding and use of OBE in California.

IMLS Priorities

IMLS requires that the LSTA 5 Year Evaluation be organized by each specific Priority in the IMLS Plan.

IMLS Priority 1

Expanding services for learning and access to information and educational resources in a variety of formats, in all types of libraries, for individuals of all ages.

IMLS Priority 1 represents the largest of the grant areas for California. Overall, 790 grants totaling over $39 million were awarded for this priority, representing 73% of all grants, and 47% of all funds awarded.

There were a number of major focus areas in this Priority, including staff development (Infopeople, Public Library Staff Education, Eureka Leadership), reading projects (California Center for the Book, California Summer Reading Program, student focused projects (Out-Of-School Time Online Homework Help), preservation (California Preservation Program, California Digital Newspaper Collection), and projects focused on supporting California's multi-faceted populations (Transforming Life After 50, Get Involved: Powered by Your Library, Early Learning with Families, California's Family Place Library Program).

A number of innovative projects were developed, including Transforming Life After 50, which developed into a regional model, starting in 2010, with the IMLS Western Regional Fellowship; the Eureka Leadership Institute with targeted grants which explored a wide breadth of new and innovative library services, pioneered by a new generation of California library leaders; and Out-Of-School Time Online Homework Help which served as a national model for homework help programs. Key individual grant projects included print on demand technology, library circulation of e-readers, and testing of book dispensing machines. In the preservation arena, the California Preservation Program continued its important work in disaster preparedness and preservation, along with projects by the Huntington Library and University of California, Riverside.

Overall the performance Outputs were generally met, including significant Outputs for participation in summer reading projects, development of innovative new projects, participation in staff development programs, and disaster preparedness training. There was a mixed result for Outcomes as data was not available for many specific CLS LSTA Plan Programs. However, in some Programs, such as preservation and staff development, data indicated that the projected Outcomes were met.

IMLS Priority 2

Developing library services that provide all users access to information through local, State, regional, national, and international electronic networks.

IMLS Priority 2 represents 190 grants totaling over $16 million, representing 18% of all grants, and 20% of all funds awarded.

Major grant projects included Califa, a cooperative buying and resource development project, various digitization projects, including California of the Past Digital Storytelling Program and Local History Digital Resources Project, and innovative projects with a new partner Internet Archive.

Califa continued its innovative work, both with its own projects such as OpenSource/OpenLibraries, and as a partner to other LSTA funded projects, such as the Local History Digital Resources Project, Infopeople and WorldCat/CalCat. Major strides continued to be made in the digitization area, including expanding the local history digitization projects to another 42 libraries and digitization of a unique trove of historic California photographs, as well as unique projects such as the digitization of previously unseen news film relating to the experience of Japanese Americans living in Northern California and during internment. The partnership with the Internet Archive resulted in the addition of over a million new titles to their archive, as well as creation of materials for blind and print-disabled users. Internet Archive was also a partner in other LSTA grants reviewed under other IMLS priorities.

Some of the Output measures were achieved, including the number of local history collections digitized; however, in other cases either the projects for specific metrics were not undertaken, or the measures were not achieved, e.g., increase in the use of state library's public research materials. Data was not available for any of the Outcome measures.

IMLS Priority 3

Providing electronic and other linkages among and between all types of libraries.

IMLS Priority 3 represents 28 grants totaling over $10 million, representing 3% of all grants, and 12% of all funds awarded.

The major project was WorldCat/CalCat, an ambitious project to increase resource sharing by providing funding to build a statewide OCLC FirstSearch California Libraries Catalog of the holdings of all California public library jurisdictions and make the inventory of the California Libraries Catalog (www.calcat.org) available through OCLC Open WorldCat via the Google and Yahoo search engines on the Internet. However, over the five years of the project, implementation and usage lagged, and as a result the project was eliminated after FY 2010.

There were no specific CSL LSTA Plan Outputs or Outcomes associated with this Priority.

IMLS Priority 4

Developing public and private partnerships with other agencies and community-based organizations.

There were no grants specifically coded for Priority 4, as all grants were associated with Priorities that reflected the services supported by the grant. However, 314 grants, from 126 libraries, were highlighted as including partnership elements. The concept of community partnerships saw a significant increase in competitive grants over the last two years, as well as in targeted grant projects for Eureka Leadership and Transforming Life After 50.

IMLS Priority 5

Targeting library services to individuals of diverse geographic, cultural, and socioeconomic backgrounds, to individuals with disabilities, and to individuals with limited functional literacy or information skills.

IMLS Priority 5 represents 64 grants totaling over $16 million, representing 6% of all grants, and 19% of all funds awarded.

The major grant projects included Library Services for Californians Unable to Use Standard Print, as well as the adult literacy projects Literacy Initiatives and California Library Literacy Services (CLLS) AmeriCorps Initiative.

Library Services for Californians Unable to Use Standard Print supported the Braille and Talking Book Library in Sacramento and the Braille Institute in Los Angeles. The two literacy projects provided additional resources for libraries supporting adult literacy programs, by providing funding for AmeriCorps workers, for education and training for staff, volunteers and adult learners, and development of training and resource materials.

The Output measure of the number of adult learners participating in adult literacy projects was met, as were two out of the five Outcome measures, based on the FY 2010/11 data. The Output measure of an increase in borrowers statewide for the Braille and Talking Book Library and the Braille Institute was not met. In northern California the number of registered borrowers remained stable over the 5-year period. Data was not available for the Outcome metric.

IMLS Priority 6

Targeting library and information services to persons having difficulty using a library and to underserved urban and rural communities, including children (from birth through age 17) from families with incomes below the poverty line (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget and revised annually in accordance with section 9902(2) of title 42) applicable to a family of the size involved.

IMLS Priority 6 represents 5 grants totaling $1.2 million, representing 0.5% of all grants, and 1.5% of all funds awarded.

The only grant project was the multi-year Rural Library Initiative that provided training, coordination with other LSTA-funded initiatives, and other needed services and resources to over 300 California rural and tribal libraries.

There were no specific CSL LSTA Plan Outputs or Outcomes associated with this Priority.

Recommendations

The California State Library, and its grantee agencies, have very effectively leveraged the use of LSTA funds over the five years under review to support significant improvements and changes in library services, as well as positively impacting the library user community.

Key recommendations include:

- Continue and broaden the new competitive grant process.
- Implement the new online application and reporting system.
- Insure linkage between the data elements in the application and reports to data required in the SPR. Link all grant projects to the appropriate IMLS priority, as well as LSTA Goal and Program at the application stage. Ensure comprehensive data review by LDS consultants familiar with both the grants and the Outputs and Outcomes included in the LSTA State Plan.
- Create both Outputs and Outcomes in the new LSTA Five Year Plan in conjunction with both LDS staff and library community stakeholders. Insure that performance metrics have real-world value.
- Institute an ongoing annual review process for the prior LSTA year. Aggregate multi-year data annually.

- Implement models that allow sharing of project results – webinars, audio-conferences, blogs, roundtables, poster sessions – to both market the program, as well as provide access to libraries wanting to replicate projects locally.
- Continue training and development with the library community on OBE. Develop a process to revise Outputs and Outcomes for the State Plan.

New Five Year Plan

In addition to other methodologies employed by CSL in the development of the new Five Year Plan, the retrospective evaluation has provided some key directions for the new Plan.

- Digital leadership, including a broad based Goal and Program that will respond to the changing dynamics in this arena.
- Linkage of Plan elements to the development of the Digital Public Library of America.
- Continuation of successful initiatives, particularly on the local level.
- Continuing focus and development in the staff development and preservation areas.

In 2011, CSL commissioned a study “Understanding California’s Demographic Shifts” by the Stanford Center on Longevity, to facilitate greater understanding of how demographic characteristics differ across the state. This seminal study, which will be useful in the development of the new plan, provides a fascinating picture of demographic shifts in California over the past decade, including data on the decrease in the white, non-Hispanic population versus the increase in the Asian, Hispanic and black populations, and the overall aging of California’s population.

BACKGROUND

Section 8134 (c) of the Institute of Museum and Library Service (IMLS)'s authorizing legislation directs the California State Library (CSL) to "independently evaluate, and report to the IMLS Director regarding the activities assisted under this subchapter, prior to the end of the 5 year plan." Based on this legislative requirement, the California State Library (CSL) has commissioned an evaluative study of the prior five years of the use of Library Services and Technology Act (LSTA) funding in California for the fiscal years 2006/2007 – 2010/2011.

The revised CSL LSTA Five Year Plan 2008 – 2012 was submitted to IMLS on August 6, 2008 and approved. IMLS provided a guide to state libraries for the Five Year Evaluation Report, which formed the basis of this evaluative study.

While the primary audience for the study is both IMLS and CSL, an important secondary audience is the broader California library community. With the significant funding available through LSTA, more than $83 million over the years studied, there is the opportunity for substantial impact on the future directions of library services in California. Understanding prior year experiences with the use of the funds will help California libraries to more effectively utilize this important funding mechanism going forward.

The evaluation is intended to allow CSL to measure progress in meeting the targets set out in its approved five year plan and to assist in making effective resource allocation decisions in its upcoming five year plan. Based on the findings of the evaluation, the report will provide recommendations for the development of the next five year plan for the use of LSTA funds in California. The evaluation and recommendations will cover strategy and process areas, looking both at the work of the grant recipients and the actions of CSL in managing the overall grant program.

In developing the evaluative study, questions and issues were identified to be addressed, including:

- Overall impact on the development of library services as a result the use of LSTA funds in California.
- The guidance of the CSL LSTA Five Year Plan and the impact of the strategies chosen therein on the specific projects funded,
- Given California's increasing socio-economic diversity, the impact of LSTA-funded projects on targeted groups.
- Evaluative processes utilized by grant recipients, and the impact from such work on grant making during the time period of the study.
- Use of performance metrics by CSL in managing LSTA supported projects and services.

In conducting the study, a key guiding principle was the need to be both transparent and independent in the assessment of all data and information. The overall value of the study is directly linked to its actual and perceived impartiality so that the findings and recommendations can be utilized by CSL and the California library community in creating effective forward direction for the next five years of LSTA funding in California.

METHODOLOGY

The evaluation consultant was selected based on the consultant's demonstrated expertise in program evaluation and knowledge of LSTA. Stacey Aldrich, State Librarian of California, and Gerry Maginnity, Bureau Chief, Library Development Services, California State Library, worked closely with the consultant on providing and interpreting evaluation data, and were consulted on a regular basis, in order to ensure common agreement on issues. As findings and recommendations were developed, ongoing conversations were held with both Aldrich and Maginnity to insure clarity and consistency.

Data was analyzed to determine both meaningful and statistically significant results, utilizing standard methodologies, primarily univariate analysis.

Qualitative and anecdotal data, including that gathered through stakeholder interviews, focus groups, and an online survey, was reviewed for common themes and causal relationships.

While none of the data was subjected to a more exhaustive analysis utilizing a standard data analysis package, such as SSPS, analysis of the data was exhaustive by the consultant in determining trends and relationships.

The years covered by the study are from FY 2006/07 through FY 2010/11, while the CSL LSTA Plan covers the years 2008-2012, as required by IMLS. In reviewing the availability of useful data, the decision was agreed upon by the consultant and CSL, with input from IMLS, to utilize these specific five years for the study since the most complete data was available for these years, including all required reports. While the CSL LSTA Plan covers through FY 2011/12, the grant year currently in process, a full data set is not available for these current projects and therefore, the decision was made to exclude this year from the study.

Data sources reviewed included State Program Reports, LSTA Final Reports, various evaluative studies of individual LSTA funded projects, strategic plans for CSL and IMLS, the prior five year evaluation study, as well as the current and prior CSL LSTA State Plan. A complete bibliography of all materials reviewed for the study is included in Appendix 13.

In order to create a statistically useful data set, the full data set for all LSTA grants during the study years was closely reviewed and revised/edited as appropriate. All grants were coded for each specific IMLS Priority addressed by the grant; while some grants appeared to address more than one Priority, the IMLS Priority chosen was the one that linked most closely to the primary grant purpose. The original coding of the grants for LSTA Plan Goal was reviewed and edited as needed. All grants awarded in FY 2006/07 and FY 2007/08 had been originally coded to goals in the prior CSL LSTA Plan covering 2002-2006; all such grants were recoded to the appropriate goal in the current LSTA Plan. Grants awarded in the last three fiscal years of the study were reviewed for accuracy in goals, and revisions made in order to insure consistency in the evaluation. All grants were also coded to the specific Program under each Goal of the LSTA Plan. Such coding work allowed a more substantive evaluation of the grants, both based on IMLS Priority, as well as the Outputs and Outcomes in the LSTA State Plan.

Multiple conversations were held with Aldrich and Maginnity during the study, eliciting insightful information on the focus and process of LSTA. Stakeholder interviews were conducted with thirteen members of the California library community, as well as a focus group and additional stakeholder interviews with LDS staff. An online survey was available to the California library community for over one month, generating 133 responses. Invitations to participate in the online survey were broadcast statewide via various library-related listservs. Both the stakeholder interviews and the online survey included responses from a broad cross section of the California library community, by type of library, position, and geographic location. The responses from all forms of input provided a frank and useful overview of the LSTA program over the past five years, as well as thoughtful suggestions for the next five years. A complete list of stakeholders interviewed and focus group participants is included in Appendix 11; Appendix 12 includes the instrument utilized for the stakeholder interviews, focus group, and online survey.

Based on the review and revisions/editing of the data, the consultant believes that the data is reliable and can be considered valid for the purposes of the study.

During a portion of the time period covered by the study (FY 2006/07 – November 2008), the consultant served as the Director of the Sacramento Public Library and on the Board of Directors of Califa, an LSTA supported project. During this time, seven targeted LSTA grants totaling $37,310 were awarded to the library and are included in the study. The consultant did not serve as the grant manager for any of the seven grant projects and was not directly involved in decision making for the grant projects. Based on discussions with CSL, it was determined that no conflict of interest existed.

FIVE YEAR OVERVIEW

Over the five fiscal years covered under this study, CSL provided $83,696,236 in LSTA awards, through 1,077 grants, to 200 different library organizations. The impact of this funding cannot be underestimated on the directions and successes of all types of California libraries. The California State Library, and its grantee agencies, very effectively leveraged the use of LSTA funds over the five years under review to support significant improvements and changes in library services, as well as positively impacting the library user community.

California receives the largest amount of LSTA funds of all states and so the trends in both strategies and implementation seen in California are important to an overall national review of LSTA. Over the period covered by this study, some important new models and trends were implemented, which will be reviewed in the sections below, and which impact recommendations going forward.

The following tables are summaries of all the grants, based on fiscal year, type of library, IMLS Priority and CSL LSTA Plan Goal.

CSL LSTA Plan 2008-2012

CSL submitted its original LSTA 2008-2012 Plan in 2007, and submitted a revision in August 2008. The major changes between the two plans were:

- Goal I – Addition of a new Program III in support of reading
- Goal IV – Elimination of Program III focusing on services to Native Americans (covered under other Plan elements)
- Goal V – Addition of new Goal with four new Programs:
 - Program I (Access for visually handicapped users)
 - Program II (Access to public research library, statewide cooperative systems)
 - Program III (Staff training)
 - Program IV (Preservation and disaster recovery)

The revisions were developed as a result of ongoing review of stakeholder input solicited for the development of the plan, as well as identification of ongoing key focus areas for the use of LSTA funds in California. Because the modifications to the Plan were made so early in the time span covered by the Plan, Outcome-based data and performance metrics could not be used to guide the decisions to make such changes.

How Grants Are Distributed

CSL has historically balanced the use of LSTA funds among ongoing statewide projects, targeted projects in developmental areas, and competitive grants which support local initiatives and serve as the R&D tool for exciting new library innovations. Statewide grants focused on projects with statewide impact, such as literacy, preservation, staff training, and cooperative library services, and generally were managed by multi-type library systems and CSL. Targeted grants focused on a range of developmental projects, such as early literacy, digitization, staff training, and out-of-school support for students; these grants required close adherence to specific grant requirements and were awarded to local libraries, although some grants also included statewide support components.

For the competitive grants category, which focuses primarily on individual libraries, one significant change by CSL in FY 2009/10 was the development and implementation of the innovative “Pitch An Idea” process. In the competitive grant category, “Pitch An Idea” has resulted in a significant positive change in the number and type of grants awarded. The “Pitch An Idea” process replaces the point of first contact by a library in the grant process from a labor intensive lengthy grant application developed by the applicant without any guidance from CSL and then a final Yes/No result. In “Pitch An Idea”, grant applicants are asked to develop a brief two page outline of the proposed project and then they are given the opportunity to “pitch” the grant, via a conference call, with a small group of CSL staff. For those grants given the go-ahead at this stage, CSL staff work closely with the applicant library to develop the grant application so that it best reflects both the needs of the local agency, as well as the overall priorities of IMLS and the CSL LSTA Plan. Reaction from the California library community has been very positive to the new process.

In FY 2009/10 and FY 2010/11, 59 “Pitch An Idea” grants were awarded, for a total of $3,447,596. Not only have the total number of libraries applying for and receiving these types of grants increased in these years, as a direct result of this innovative process, but library types that previously had been underrepresented are beginning to participate and be awarded grants. In FY 2006/07, before the implementation of “Pitch An Idea”, 175 applications were received from 101 public libraries, with 125 grants awarded totaling $2,479,428; in FY 2010/11, the second year of “Pitch An Idea”, 302 applications from 143 public libraries were received, with 175 grants totaling $3,721,451 awarded. In the first three years of the study, no grants were awarded to school libraries, while 3 grants were awarded during the two fiscal years of “Pitch An Idea”. The “Pitch An Idea” process is critical to the continuing role of the use of LSTA funds for R&D purposes, as much of the truly creative change in library services in California is developed at the local level. In addition, CSL benefits from the pitch phase in being able to discern trends in service changes and, as appropriate, develop statewide targeted projects around such trends.

Cash Match and In Kind Contributions

While most CSL LSTA grants do not require either a cash match or in-kind contribution, it is instructive to see how LSTA funds are leveraged by the addition of local support, either with a cash match or in-kind contribution.

Number of libraries	114	128
Number of grants	216	371

Cash matches represented a 14% increase, and in kind contributions represented a 25% increase, in overall funds available for projects. In total, the two additional funding sources represented $32,524,794, which increased the total funding available for LSTA funded projects to $116,221,030, or a 39% increase. The most effective model for cash match has been the local match multi-year increase requirement for cash match, pioneered originally with adult literacy grants and more recently with the Out-of-School Time (OST) Online Homework Help grants. 167 grants included both a Cash Match and an In Kind Contribution.

Appendices 4 and 5 contain a list by library of the 5 year total of either Cash Match or In Kind Contribution.

Performance Metrics

Each of the 12 Programs in the State Plan includes specific Output and Outcome metrics. While some of the grant projects were able to link closely to such metrics, there was not a clear, systemic effort to gather data related to all such metrics. Under the discussion below of grants under each IMLS priority, reference is made to grant projects with successful experiences in using metrics.

Starting in FY 2009/10, CSL revised both its application and reporting methodologies for LSTA grants, and effectively included more requirements for performance metrics. The new procedures included, at the application stage, the requirement for specific performance Outputs and Outcomes, as well as how the measurement would be obtained, and the reporting of such data on the six month and final reports. However, there is not always a clear linkage between these performance metrics and the metrics in the applicable CSL State LSTA Plan Goal or Program.

A key issue for all types of performance metrics, whether Outcome Based Evaluation (OBE) or not, is the compacted time frame for grant projects. Since all grants are awarded for a one year time frame, it is not unusual for actual grant activities to begin in the second quarter of the grant year, leaving only six to nine months for the development of performance metrics. Additionally, since some grant projects may need several months of development to begin to attract and impact the targeted population after the initiation of grant activities, this further narrows the window for the capture of performance metrics.

Another challenge, unique to California, was the frequent late passage of the State Budget, which prevented the release of LSTA funds to grantee agencies. Passage of the State budget was delayed 85 days in 2008 and 100 days in 2010. For many grantee agencies forced to wait for the funding to become available locally, this caused a late start up of such one year projects, effectively compressing the timeframe in which to demonstrate performance metrics.

Outcome Based Evaluation (OBE)

CSL has invested significant time, money and attention in developing capacity in the California library community to understand and effectively utilize Outcome Based Evaluation (OBE). CSL worked with outside consultant Rhea Joyce Rubin to focus on both competitive and priority grant projects to develop Outcome based metrics for evaluation, including Eureka Leadership, Family Place Libraries, Literacy and Workforce Development and Transforming Life After 50 (TLA50). Additionally, other projects, such as the California Summer Reading Program, developed Outcome metrics for use statewide. Two years ago the grant application was revised to include a tool to help determine OBE elements.

Over the five year period of the study, 194 grants were used to provide data for OBE, representing 18% of all grants, with a significant majority of such grants in the last three fiscal years. Two new grant processes implemented during this time frame – Eureka Leadership grants (starting in FY 2008/09) and competitive “Pitch An Idea” grants (starting in FY 2009/10) - have a significantly higher percentage of grants identified for OBE, with 75% of Eureka grants and 69% of Pitch An Idea grants in this category. Since both of these grant projects are single library based grant projects, versus statewide or targeted, this demonstrates a significant increase in the use and understanding of OBE by libraries statewide, as well as a commitment by CSL to broaden the use of this instrument. The use of the new application checklist for OBE, starting in FY 2009/10, to assist applicants in determining Outcomes has proven to be helpful. Comments on the impact of OBE in specific grant projects will be discussed in the following sections on IMLS Priorities.

However, library community interest in and understanding of OBE remains mixed. A wide range of comments in both the survey and stakeholder interviews revealed mixed support for OBE, with both a lack of knowledge of process and professional concerns about its applicability to the library world.

“Participating in an OBE grant focuses the organization on the tasks of project scheduling and record keeping, which is a good thing. Simply engaging with the public through interviews and surveys related to a specific project benefits the organization with feedback and a bond with the community strengthened by targeted service and respectful communication. Any organization participating in an OBE grant needs to factor into its planning the staff time required to evaluate the outcome.”

“I found that when I applied for an LSTA grant the OBE helped me to really think in specifics about what it was that I was trying to achieve.”

“My project was one that profited from an outcome-based schema. The training on how to determine whether a project was outcome-based was helpful, and it aided me in designed pre- and post-surveys to determine the outcomes, as well as making me think about which outcomes were desirable and how to measure them.”

“OBE is great at focusing applicants and recipients in both the planning and execution phases, but it does not take into account the need to adjust targets once grants projects have begun.”

“It doesn't always show the true successes and failures in a project however I do see the need for some quantifiable statistics. A combination of statistics and general expression of experiences/storytelling is the best way to show success or failure.”

“I have a love-hate relationship with OBE. OBE helps us to think through our projects and what impacts we really need to have. But OBE in the projects I have been involved in has always left me unsatisfied, especially about the impacts it doesn't capture and the immense amount of time OBE takes.”

“Without a large investment in staff time our OBE is of necessity pretty superficial. Intellectually it is an excellent idea; in practice, it is difficult for a smaller library to measure outcomes. Often they are written for ease of measurement, not for real world usefulness.”

Because of the paucity of grants in the early years of the study that utilized OBE, it was difficult for CSL to integrate the use of such data into policy and managerial decisions. In projects that developed and implemented a systemic use of OBE, such as early childhood literacy projects, CSL has been able to utilize such data and evaluative studies on the direction of such projects.

An additional challenge to the use of outcome-based data on policy and managerial decisions at the state level has been the continuing steepness of the learning curve, at both the state and local level, and the resulting validity of the data created. The type of training developed more recently, for projects such as the Eureka Leadership Institute, has proven to be successful, as well as the close working relationship between grant recipients and CSL staff on the “Pitch An Idea” grants, whereby specific Outcome-based data elements are developed at the start of the project. There is clearly a positive result in both the Eureka and “Pitch An Idea” grant projects in both the capacity to undertake OBE, as well as the actual Outcomes that resulted. Development and communication concerning the implementation of the OBE process, including how to create meaningful, statistically valid survey and interview processes, needs to continue.

While it is laudable that there has been a significant increase in the last two fiscal years of the study in the number of grants that utilized OBE, they still only represented 32% of all grants, and 27% of all funds, during those years. The challenge going forward to increase the impact and utility of OBE will be how to expand OBE meaningfully to ongoing major statewide priority grant projects, such as California Center for the Book or Califa, as well the addition of targeted grant projects, such as Public Library Staff Education Program (PLSEP), to the OBE process, as both types represent a significant commitment of LSTA resources.

EVALUATION FINDINGS

IMLS Priorities and CSL LSTA Plan Goals

IMLS requires that the LSTA 5 Year Evaluation be organized by each specific Priority in the IMLS Plan. Under the CSL LSTA Plan, specific Goals, Programs and Activities were identified, as well as Outputs and Outcomes for each Program. In order to meet the IMLS requirement, the following Evaluation Findings will include specific LSTA Plan Goals and Programs under each Priority. The statewide, targeted, and competitive initiatives are included in this evaluation. The following chart indicates the IMLS Priority, CSL Goal Area, and the Program Area that will be covered in each Priority section.

A Table at the start of the discussion of each Priority provides an overview of the number of grants by each Goal; in two cases there is no discussion of the specific grants within that Goal as there were a limited number of grants. Priority 3, Goal II included only one grant and Priority 5, Goal II included only two grants.

In some cases, the evaluation of some Programs may be included under more than one Priority. As an example, CSL LSTA Plan Goal I, Program III is evaluated under both IMLS Priorities 1 and 5.

A Table of IMLS Priorities and CSL LSTA Goals and Programs by Priority is included in Appendix 6.

IMLS PRIORITY 1: Expanding services for learning and access to information and educational resources in a variety of formats, in all types of libraries, for individuals of all ages.

Overview of CSL Grants in Priority 1

IMLS Priority 1 represents the largest of the grant areas for California, not surprisingly since it is the most broad-based goal. Overall, 790 grants totaling over $39 million were awarded for this priority, representing 73% of all grants, and 47% of all funds awarded. The following tables capture an overview of the grants in this Priority.

IMLS Priority 1 Evaluation Findings by CSL Goals and Programs

CSL Goal 1: Literacy and Educational Support

Program II: Curriculum Support: Provide homework assistance through public libraries during after school hours. Demonstrate the value of local homework help programs and the value of community partnerships in the continuation of such programs.

Projects

Out-of-School-Time (OST) Online Homework Help was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $4,365,506 in LSTA funding.

Over the five year period of the study, there was a significant commitment to providing homework assistance through California's public libraries.

The Out-of-School-Time (OST) Online Homework Help grant project awarded 131 grants to 62 libraries. The project used a diminishing cost-sharing model that required libraries to share an increasing percentage of costs over the three years of the grant funding, and to encourage local funding at the cessation of LSTA funding. While usage rates appear to be decreasing over the project years, this is a natural result of having reached the majority of libraries interested in participation and the three year phase out of ongoing libraries from LSTA funding; with fewer libraries participating in the LSTA funded project, use data drops. There is no data available on how many libraries that participated in the LSTA funded project have continued to fully fund similar homework help projects only with local funds. One important result of the development of the project in California was the establishment of a national model for homework help projects; both CSL and individual participating libraries were frequently contacted by out-of-state libraries for information on the project, and information sessions were provided at national library conferences on the California model.

The SchoolRooms Project was funded 2006-2009 with a total of $565,733 in LSTA funding.

The SchoolRooms project was modeled in two different multi-branch libraries in the state – Shasta Public Libraries and San Diego Public Library – from FY 2006/07 to FY 2009/10, testing a new vendor product for access to digital homework resources. Due to significant vendor technical and content issues which affected efficiency and sustainability, as well as lack of strong support from the public school community, neither participating library experienced the type of success that had been expected.

Performance Metrics

In 2008 CSL commissioned a consultant review of the OST project, and the study revealed success rates, based on a sampling study, ranging from 63% to 84%, dependent on vendor and language. Overall, nearly 560,000 user sessions (each user session does not reflect a unique user) were recorded in 2008; however, there has not been an attempt to use OBE for the project so it is not possible to assess, on an overall basis, the participant success rate. Anecdotally, libraries reported positive feedback from both students and parents, indicating a high level of appreciation for the service.

Table 9: Performance Metrics for CSL LSTA Plan Goal I Program II

	CSL LSTA PLAN PROJECTION	RESULTS	DATA SOURCE/NOTES
Output	100,000 California students will receive after-school homework assistance from public libraries.	560,000 user sessions in 2008	From 2008 consultant review; each user session does not reflect a unique user.
Outcome	50% of participants in after-school homework assistance from public libraries will report that the completion rate of homework has increased and their grades have improved.	63% - 84% success rate in 2008	From 2008 sample in consultant review; specific Outcome not measured.

CSL Goal 1: Literacy and Educational Support

Program III: Promote Reading: Support library programs that promote the value of reading and the library's role as a place to acquire and discuss books.

Projects

Reading is alive and well in California and strongly supported by major statewide and targeted grant projects, with several notable developments.

The California Summer Reading Program was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $384,891 in LSTA funding.

The California Summer Reading Program (SRP) developed an OBE component for participants starting with Summer 2010, and developed an Outcomes Manual for libraries to utilize in planning and evaluating local projects. Both the manual and training that was provided to local participating libraries helped develop expertise and confidence in the use of OBE. The OBE process tested two major Outcomes, and provided suggested survey and focus group tools for use. Additionally, a strong element relating to models for community partnerships was developed and training provided for local participants.

The Early Learning with Families was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $2,229,231 in LSTA funding. The California's Family Place Library Program was funded 2008-2010 with a total of $1,316,372 in LSTA funding.

These two major initiatives, with targeted grant projects, focused on early childhood literacy and the important role of the public library as a valuable resource, through 103 grants for Early Learning with Families (ELF) in FY2006-2008 and 30 grants for Family Place Libraries (FPL) in FY2008-2010.

FPL succeeded ELF and provided a resource for libraries, based on the national model, by developing a Family Place Training Center in Los Angeles and providing grants to 27 public libraries.

The California Center for the Book was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $1,148,573 in LSTA funding.

The California Center for the Book underwent a major transition during the evaluation period in moving from its longtime home at the UCLA Department of Information Studies. It moved to a new location at a busy branch of the Los Angeles Public Library, managed by the Southern California Library Cooperative, in order to enhance services to public libraries. Many ongoing programs were continued during the evaluation period, while some new ones were added with mixed results. The program on water issues in California had a lower than expected level of participation. A model program for book discussion groups utilizing audiobooks, which also encouraged the use of downloadable media from the library, had an anecdotal result of reintegrating a vision impaired reader back into a book discussion group.

An interesting standalone project, Rancho KIDS (Kids Interactive Discovery Space) was developed by the Rancho Cucamonga Public Library (FY 2008 – 2010) to create Play and Learn islands, which combine the blended service element of traditional library services with children's museum type spaces, programming, and manipulatives. The project has been extremely successful, with additional Play and Learn islands created for loan to other libraries, and another LSTA supported project, Califa, beginning to market the islands for purchase by libraries.

Performance Metrics

In each of Summer 2010 and Summer 2011, over 550,000 children, teens and adults participated in local library summer reading programs. The relevant Output - 50% of summer reading program participants will report that they read and enjoy more books – was not specifically tested in the new OBE process, but other relevant Outcomes were sampled. In once such sample, 67% of children who participated in Summer 2010 SRP said they like to talk about books with friends. Full information about the project is available at <http://www.cla-net.org/displaycommon.cfm?an=1&subarticlenbr=64>.

ELF provided a wealth of resources and training to grant recipients, including a website at <http://elflibraries.org>, and also included a significant partnership process. An assessment process to evaluate Outcomes was developed; however, continuing feedback that the assessment process was difficult to implement led to a consultant study of ELF in 2009. Comments provided in 2008 identified some broad-based impacts of ELF:

“Some general outcomes observed at all sites: ELF libraries created more child and family friendly periodic spaces. ELF provided a valuable opportunity for staff development. ELF was the stimulus to provide new or enhanced services to families with babies and toddlers. Outcomes that indicated trends at most participating libraries: ELF encouraged libraries to think in new ways about their services and service priorities. ELF gave libraries increased credibility with community partners that provide social services to families. ELF increased political capital in some libraries. ELF libraries have had to rethink some established policies and practices that conflict with the goal of creating a family friendly environment.”

However, it was also noted that “It is not clear if the ELF mission and goals have been or will be diffused to other libraries in those systems with multiple outlets.”

Based on an evaluation of the FPL project conducted in 2011, the Outcomes established for the project were met or exceeded, in general, with one exception. Most notably, 85% of participating parents saw the library as a destination place for themselves and their young children, as well as a community resource and support for their family.

The Output measures for the California Center for the Book for the Letters about Literature project were exceeded in terms of the number of students participating; however, participation has been dropping over the past few years. The Outcome measure for the same project was not measured by any participants, other than on an anecdotal basis. While there is significant anecdotal data on participation in book discussion groups supported by Center programs, no consistent data has been gathered as to overall participation numbers, as noted in the Outcome measurement. Information is not available on the Outcome metric for book discussion groups.

CSL Goal II: Responsive Changes in Library Services

Program IV: Assist and support libraries in projects that address the learning and cultural needs of diverse populations.

Projects

Because of the broad-based nature of this Program area, there were over 147 grant projects focused in this area.

The Eureka Leadership project was funded 2008-2010 with a total of $297,190 in LSTA funding.

The 39 Eureka targeted grants in this Program, out of a total of 67 Eureka grants from 2008 – 2010, explored a wide breadth of new and innovative library services, pioneered by a new generation of California library leaders participating in California’s premier library leadership institute. Participants first attended the training institute and then were given a grant for a project that would assist in developing leadership skills. A significant number of the grants utilized OBE, again increasing statewide capacity for the process.

The Transforming Life After 50 (TLA50) project was funded 2007 – 2010 with a total of $1,187,593 in LSTA funds.

The work on this project began in 2006 with a survey of California libraries. Of the 230 responses, 65% of the libraries saw Boomers as an important audience but only 6% had plans and only 40% offered any type of adult programming. TLA50 was then initiated by CSL in 2007, developed into a regional model, starting in 2010, with the IMLS Western Regional Fellowship as a collaborative effort of the California State Library, Idaho Commission for Libraries, Oregon State Library, and Washington State Library in partnership as a national continuing education model, funded by a grant from the U.S. Institute for Museum and Library Services, Laura Bush 21st Century Librarian Program with additional support from the participating State Libraries. In California in 2008, there was an initial review done of the preliminary assessment efforts undertaken by local libraries. A 3-day institute was designed and 88 participants from 44 libraries attended; 24 libraries subsequently received targeted grants for implementation. Projects included new community collaborations, innovative volunteer opportunities, and new program models. The targeted implementation grants included a number that had OBE elements, thereby increasing the capacity for understanding and use of OBE.

The Get Involved project was funded 2008-2010 with a total of $904,112 in LSTA funding.

One of the findings of TLA50 was related to the interest in volunteering. As a result, the three year Get Involved grant program was developed to expand the visibility and contributions of skilled volunteers through public libraries. With tens of thousands of Californians, especially baby boomers, seeking new ways to use their skills and experience to make a difference in their community, public libraries are positioned to engage this talent to extend their capacity in the community and to develop advocates and supporters of their services. All California public libraries were provided with subscriptions to VolunteerMatch.org, and 52 participating libraries were provided with training on effective volunteer practices. Since 2009, 16,500 plus volunteer referrals have been made through VolunteerMatch to the libraries. Additionally, public library statistics show an increase in volunteers in two specific areas: hours and literacy. The total volunteer hours have increased by 27%, and the number of literacy tutors has increased by 13.7%.

The Program included a majority of all “Pitch An Idea” grants. Many of the local grants supported by either the Eureka or TLA50 projects developed new and innovative models that could serve as statewide examples. The Palos Verdes Library District developed a Palos Verdes Library District Virtual Business Center, under the TLA50 project, and the San Diego County Library developed a New Immigrant's Information Center under the Eureka project. Because of the diverse communities that libraries serve throughout California, the significant level of focus in this Program area can be seen as a successful model on an ongoing basis.

Performance Metrics

For those TLA50 grants identified as OBE, a variety of Outcomes were reported including:

Of the 128 participants, all reported achieving at least one of their own learning goals from setting up an email account to feeling more confident about searching Internet sites, to successfully creating and printing a Word document, to creating a small digital photo album. (2010-CA-39229-39825).

Survey responses from community members who volunteered for this project reported the following:

Of the 54 community volunteers who participated in the project, 100% felt their library volunteer experience benefited the community, and 85% felt more connected to the community after volunteering. Survey responses from over 700 community members (63% of whom were over the age of 50) who attended the adult programs reported the following: 86% felt that they learned something new because of their attendance, 54% reported that these new pilot programs were more relevant to them than programs previously offered, and 84% felt more connected to the community after attending a program. (2010-CA-39229-39826).

For the continuing education portion of the TLA50 project, aimed at library professionals, an outside evaluator administered and analyzed surveys of the participants. The report stated:

“The results reveal that, overall, the Fellowship experience did indeed increase knowledge, confidence and stage of implementation. The majority of the Fellows (96.1 %) rated the Fellowship as excellent or very good, and out of the 96 initially enrolled participants, a total of 80 Fellows successfully completed the year-long educational experience, resulting in a completion rate of 83.3%. Furthermore, despite both perceived and real barriers, 94% of Fellows went on to make progress in implementing enhanced service and engagement strategies for older adults.”

For sustainability purposes, a comprehensive website at www.transforminglifeafter50.org provides training curriculum, model projects and tools to assist any interested library in better serving and engaging older adults.

Eureka Leadership grants that utilized OBE reported sample results as follows:

- 60% of participants said that they know how to use the PVLD Facebook application for reading and library use. 60% participants also said that they now have a greater awareness of library materials, services, and programs. (2010-CA-39193-39208)
- Of the 35 library staff members participating in the customer service training, 94% of library staff responding said they understand how their job and unit contributes to the mission, vision, and values of OCL; 94% of library staff responding reported that this process improved communication and understanding about other library units; 89% of library supervisors reported that this process improved communication and understanding about other library units; 56% of library supervisors reported an improved attitude about working with other library units and 22% reported that they already had a positive attitude about working with other library units. (2008-CA-32164-32167)
- Of the 330 students from classes participating in the library outreach campaign, 50% of Garfield Campus students received a new library card. At least 45% of Garfield Campus students from classes participating in library outreach campaign visited the Library Connection at least once more as indicated by raffle ticket entries. Library patrons borrowed an average of 51% more literacy materials during the grant period with the average number of times a literacy item circulated increasing by 2.5 times per item. (2009-CA-35722-36894)

In 2010, libraries participating in the Get Involved grant projects reported that 67.5% of libraries responding to the survey reported that they have engaged volunteers in the high impact roles described in their volunteer engagement work plans. For sustainability purposes, a comprehensive website at <http://www.library.ca.gov/lds/getinvolved.html> provides resources to participating libraries and ones interested in starting in the area.

The Output and Outcome measures noted above for this Program focused both on replicability and targeting. For the Output metric, the number of projects created met the metric of 20 new programs. For replicability, both TLA50 and Get Involved undertook extensive regional symposia and created information sharing networks that shared lessons learned and models created to all interested libraries. Both initiatives also have given multiple presentations at annual California Library Association (CLA) conferences.

CSL Goal II: Responsive Changes in Library Services

Program II: Support demonstration projects that model and test innovative technological solutions for improving library services that are more responsive to local needs.

Projects

With only a total of 52 grants in this Program area, it might appear that this was an underutilized area of focus. However, many grant projects included in other Program areas had significant technological components but were coded to the other areas based on primary area of focus.

Several innovative grant projects were highlighted in this Program, including Eureka projects, implementation of a new digital print on demand technology in two libraries, an innovative project combining digital access and local history, as well as a number of “Pitch An Idea” grants.

Espresso Book Machines from On-Demand books, providing print on demand service, were provided to Sacramento Public Library for its Sacramento Public Library Independent Press project and Riverside County Library for its Flash Books project with interesting results. Both libraries experienced interest in self-publishing, with one library (Sacramento Public Library) marketing its project as a community writing and publishing center, called the I Street Press. The Riverside County Library project resulted in 122 self-published books.

San Jose Public Library created an exciting new project Scan Jose, creating historic walking tours available on Internet enabled mobile devices and the Internet. The project has generated interest on social media platforms, as well as traditional print media.

The Eureka projects reflected the diversity of interest of the Eureka participants, including three focused on services for teens.

Performance Metrics

One Eureka project by the Hayward Public Library Teenscope Video Project to provide training in video production, resulted in an Outcome wherein over 75% of the participants reported that they gained new skills through the project, and 86% of community members who viewed the films created as a result of the project percent reported learning something new about youth in the community and gaining a better understanding of youth in community through the project.

Based on the projected Outputs, the quantitative measurement was met; however, there is no strong evidence of how such model projects have been shared statewide for replication.

Output	15 demonstration projects will be implemented, evaluated and shared statewide as model programs for replication.	52 grant projects	LSTA 5 year quantitative data

For those projects that included OBE, several reported meeting the Outcome, e.g. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Over 75% of the participants reported that they gained new skills through the project. 	LSTA Final Program Reports

CSL Goal III: Digital Preservation and Resource Sharing

Program I: Digitizing Library Resources: Assist libraries in their efforts to digitize library resources in all formats, in a standard manner that allows statewide compatibility in both the images and the records describing them.

Projects

The California Digital Newspaper Collection was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $264,546 in LSTA funding.

The University of California, Riverside (UCR) Center for Bibliographical Studies and Research (CBSR) continued its leadership in the preservation and digitization of California's newspapers, through two grant projects for the California Newspaper Project (CNP) - the California Digital Newspaper Collection and Preserving California Newspaper Negatives (CSL LSTA State Goal V, Program IV). The digitization grant resulted in over 400,000 pages of historic California newspapers being digitized, available for browsing and searching at the California Digital Newspaper Collection (CDNC) at <http://cdnc.ucr.edu/cdnc>. In 2010, CBSR developed a Newspaper Digitization Best Practices Guides for California libraries, to provide a resource for California libraries interested in newspaper digitization.

CSL Goal IV: Technological Access for All

Program II: Public Awareness and Training: Encourage local, regional, and statewide projects to raise public awareness about the availability of technological tools and electronic resources both on-site and remotely.

Projects

The major grants in this Program included a very interesting cutting edge project piloted in two libraries utilizing a free-standing book dispensing machine, a model to test library circulation of e-readers, as well as a number of both Eureka and "Pitch An Idea" grants.

In 2007/08 grants totaling $425,827 were awarded to the Contra Costa County Library Contra Costa County Library (CCCL) to Go: Using Technology To Pioneer Self-Serve Outlets and the Yuba County Library Yuba County Library Bokomaten Rural Challenge to beta test the use of Bokomaten automated book dispensing machines, manufactured by a Swedish company. The two libraries had significantly different experiences, primarily as a result of the differences in library capacity and communities served. The administrator at the Contra Costa County Library responsible for the project, in reviewing their experience, reflected on some key lessons learned that have applicability to other similar projects:

- The difficulty in dealing with an international vendor in terms of time zones and language.

- The need for adequate preparation on the part of the library for technical challenges in a new-to-market product
- Awareness of the ongoing convergence of new technologies that could affect user interest

The Contra Costa County Library has continued its use of the renamed Library A Go Go machines at three locations, but has recently experienced a decrease in circulation, possibly as a result of no longer providing staffed hours at the machines. The Yuba County Library consistently experienced significant operational problems with the machine, which resulted in an ongoing low usage rate.

The e-reader circulation project, Circulating eReaders, at the Sacramento Public Library, provided 315 e-readers for circulation to library patrons, pre-loaded with books. Training was provided to 234 library staff members and 120 library patrons on the use of e-readers. Among the key findings from an eReader borrower survey were the following:

- 76.6 percent were first time eReader users; 31.4 percent reported having used eBooks before borrowing the eReader and 54.2 percent of them borrowed the eBooks from Sacramento Public Library (via Overdrive)
- 69.3 percent were satisfied or very satisfied with the pre-loaded eBook selection of the eReader
- 82.1 percent reported the eReader being easy or very easy to use; only 14.6 percent reported technical difficulties
- 84.4 percent were likely or very likely to recommend the eReader service to a friend and 67.1 percent were likely or very likely to continue borrowing eReaders from the library
- 46.5 percent were likely or very likely to purchase an eReader after having borrowed one through the library
- 44.5 percent of eReader borrowers prefer print books, and 40.3 percent had no preference

The eleven Eureka projects in this Program focused on a broad array of technology-based projects, ranging from focus on technology skills for jobseekers with the Computer Training for Adults at the Alpine County Library/Archives, an interesting model for ex-offenders with the Welcome Back: Helping Ex-Offenders Rejoin the Workforce project at the San Diego County Library, and technology training for ESL students with the Crossing the Digital Divide Together project at the Long Beach Public Library.

Performance Metrics

The lack of a systemic basis for collecting data on the Output prevents a definitive answer as to whether the quantitative measure was met. However, the use of OBE for several of the projects was able to demonstrate that a significant majority of such projects did result in an increase in patron technology proficiency, as well as awareness of library electronic resources. As an example, a Eureka project for ESL students included outcomes noting that “85% of the adult students who completed the 11 week course scored 84% or above on the course final ESL/computer literacy examination, 80% of the students from the class have become regular library users, and 95% of the students are continuing to learn English through a weekly ESL class.” Outcomes experienced by the e-reader project included increased patron skills with e-readers and increased library staff skills in managing emerging technologies.

CSL Goal V: Access and Accessibility

Program III: Skills for Service: California’s Libraries staffs have the knowledge and skills needed to support valuable programs and services for their communities as they relate to the priorities of LSTA.

Projects

Two major staff training projects are funded within this Program – Infopeople and the Public Library Staff Education Program.

Infopeople was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $8,889,964 in LSTA funding.

Infopeople is a project for statewide library staff training. Infopeople’s continuing role in the life of California libraries covers more than a simple training impact, as it serves as a resource for the development and implementation of other statewide projects, such as the Eureka Leadership Institute and the Rural Library Initiative, as well as the digital home for many LSTA-project developed materials. From both stakeholder interviews and survey respondents there was universally acknowledged value to the role that Infopeople has played for California libraries. Over the period of the review, the focus of much of the training has changed from on-ground training to online courses, podcasts and webinars; in 2006 over 5,000 library staff members participated in on-ground training programs versus slightly over 1,000 in 2010. Conversely, in 2006 there were only 3,000 participants in online courses, podcasts and webinars compared with over 8,500 in 2010. The Institute of Museum and Library Services recognized Infopeople's success in May 2009 when it named Infopeople one of its model projects to feature in their monthly newsletter.

The Public Library Staff Education Program was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $1,869,136 in LSTA funding.

The venerable Public Library Staff Education Program (PLSEP) is a targeted grant project focusing on providing financial support for public library staff to obtain a Master in Library and Information Science (MLIS) degree from an ALA-accredited library school program. Over the period of the review, the project parameters were expanded to include staff at County Public Law Libraries and classes for the Library Support Staff Certification (LSSC) program (some of which are provided by Infopeople). Over the review period, 264 grants were awarded to staff at 92 libraries and 123 staff members received MLIS degrees.

Performance Metrics

While Infopeople has not been identified as an OBE project, they have implemented post-training participant evaluations, skills assessment tools, and library supervisor/administrator evaluations to measure the impact of their training programs. For PLSEP, no formal performance metrics have been developed for this project, other than tracking the number of participants who complete the graduate degree program.

The Output measure has clearly been met through the significant participation in Infopeople programs. Data on the Outcome measure is gathered by Infopeople for many of its individual training offerings but has not been aggregated on a program-wide basis.

Table 14: Performance Metrics for CSL LSTA Plan Goal V Program III

	CSL LSTA PLAN PROJECTION	RESULTS	DATA SOURCE/NOTES
Output	Annually, a minimum of 4,000 participants will attend learning opportunities to improve their skills for serving their communities.	Infopeople: Over 5 years, over 68,000 individuals attended on-ground, contract, web-based, or partner project training events. PLSEP: 264 participants over 5 years	LSTA Final Program Reports
Outcome	50% of staff who attend learning opportunities will report and demonstrate new attitudes and skills in their delivery of library and information services to their community.	Infopeople: Individual evaluation data for all training events, but not aggregated. In 2010 Infopeople reported that over 90% of those who attend an Infopeople training event report a significant increase in their knowledge and skills as a result of the training. PLSEP: No Outcome testing.	LSTA Final Program Reports

CSL Goal V: Access and Accessibility

Program IV: Preservation and Disaster Recovery: California Libraries ensure the best possible access to important resources through preservation and disaster recovery programs.

Projects

The California Preservation Program was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $1,018,885 in LSTA funding.

California has a long time investment in preservation activities, under the rubric of the California Preservation Program (CPP). Funds have been leveraged with National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH), IMLS and other corporate and grant funds. CPP also integrates its training and other consulting services with other LSTA funded initiatives, such as Infopeople and Califa. One of the hallmarks of CPP is its broad based organizational work with many types of libraries, archives, local history organizations, museums and other cultural entities. During the evaluation period, CPP also initiated a project, California Light and Sound: The California Audiovisual Preservation Project (FY 2010-11) to provide digitization and access services for historic California audiovisual recordings to serve as a prototype for an ongoing project. Additionally, CPP has initiated programming with California's tribal community on preserving tribal history. The California Preservation Program received a national award from the American Library Association, the George Cunha/Susan Swartzburg award for its role as the exemplary statewide preservation program of the decade. As a consequence, the CPP has become widely recognized for its leadership in collaborative preservation work and serves as a national model.

The Improving Access to Important California Historical Manuscript Collections was funded 2006-2008 with a total of $361,603 in LSTA funding.

The Huntington Library utilized LSTA funding to preserve and create greater access to unique collections at the Library relating to California identity, including digitization of historic photographs, with online access via the Online Archive of California (OAC). Additionally, the Library facilitated a planning process for coordination of the acquisition and preservation of California records of historical importance.

The Preserving California Newspaper Negatives project was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $227,732 in LSTA funding.

The University of California, Riverside (UCR) Center for Bibliographical Studies and Research (CBSR) continued its leadership in the preservation and digitization of California's newspapers, through two grant projects for the California Newspaper Project (CNP) - Preserving California Newspaper Negatives and the California Digital Newspaper Collection (CSL LSTA State Goal III, Program I). Through the preservation grant, CBSR received and processed over 50,000 reels of negatives from BMI Imaging Systems, including the creation of bibliographic records in WorldCat, for permanent storage as part of the California Newspaper Microfilm Archive (CNMA). Additionally, the project processed newspaper negatives from CSL, provided institutions with copies of titles, and supported other LSTA funded newspaper preservation projects.

Performance Metrics

CPP more than met the Output of 2 learning opportunities per year, with multiple disaster preparedness and response workshops, as well as other training opportunities, scheduled annually. CPP has also utilized a pre and post workshop Outcome evaluation process, focused on effecting change in organizational behaviors; in 2006, 71% of disaster and preparedness workshop attendees noted that they were very confident in implementing their library's disaster plan. Based on the number of libraries that have participated in disaster preparedness workshops with CPP, over 300 California libraries now have disaster response plans.

CSL Goal II: Responsive Changes in Library Services

Program II: Support demonstration projects that model and test innovative technological solutions for improving library services that are more responsive to local needs

Projects

Califa was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $3,157,518 in LSTA funding.

The purpose of Califa is to provide economies of scale for the coordinated purchase of library resources, implement needed training on new products and technologies, and communicate with and coordinate member libraries for efficient customer services. In 2010, Califa estimated that it saved its 231 member libraries over $4 million on the purchase of products and services, as well as generating over $150,000 in local income to support Califa. The impact of Califa on the California library community has been significant, and goes beyond its immediate purposes. It is a partner agency for other LSTA funded projects such as the Local Digital History Resources Project and Infopeople, collaborates with other California library consortia, and serves as an important R&D resource for testing of innovative new services and products. Some of the innovative projects that it has been involved with are the testing and development of open source software for library ILS systems, under an LSTA grant(see Goal IV, Program I below), and the WorldCat/CalCat project (see Priority 3 below).

CSL Goal III: Digital Preservation and Resource Sharing

Program I: Digitizing Library Resources: Assist libraries in their efforts to digitize library resources in all formats, in a standard manner that allows statewide compatibility in both the images and the records describing them.

Projects

California of the Past Digital Storytelling Program was funded 2007-2010 with a total of $1,211,099 in LSTA funding.

California of the Past Digital Storytelling Program (DST) was initiated in 2007, based on a successful project by the San Diego Public Library as part of an earlier LSTA grant. The grant libraries create digital stories of their communities, with such stories hosted at the California of the Past website (www.digitalstorystation.com). Over the period under review 31 libraries have participated, with additional technical support provided by Califa. Over the four year period of the grant, several hundred stories were recorded and participating libraries utilized the new resource. Many of the participating libraries have commented on how the digital storytelling program has helped foster community partnerships, such as those at the San Bernardino County Library with adult literacy students (2010-CA-39190-39314) and with the San Manuel tribe. (2010-CA-39190-39315).

The Local History Digital Resources Project was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $1,316,798 in LSTA funding.

The California Local History Digital Resources Project (LHDRP), supported by the California Digital Library (CDL) Online Archive of California (OAC), a project of the University of California and Califa, is a multi-year, targeted grant project that provides a "solution in a box" for public, academic, and specialized libraries seeking to become conversant with developing digital primary resource collections. Each year, a group of institutions select, scan, and catalogue approximately 200 items each for inclusion in OAC and Calisphere and publication on local websites. Since its inception in 2000, nearly 90 libraries have participated with nearly 30,000 digital objects created and available for viewing on Calisphere (<http://www.calisphere.universityofcalifornia.edu/>), a digital repository created by OAC focusing on the diverse history and culture of California. During the evaluation period for grants, 42 libraries received grants, including public, academic and special libraries, with each grant recipient digitizing up to 200 objects. Ongoing support has been provided by Califa, through hosting on its CONTENTdm server, as well as by CDL through the development of a Calisphere widget that project participants can embed on their local websites that will directly link to their objects, and development of a metadata editor.

The Digitization of Historic California Photographs was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $379,721 in LSTA funding.

The Digitization of Historic California Photographs enabled CSL to digitize one of its most unique assets, with over 36,000 images now available through CSL's Picture Catalog. The digitized images have been used nationally in major photographic expositions, as well as many films and print publications.

Two additional major projects involving the Internet Archive, a new LSTA partner during this review period, were key in enhancing digital resources in California libraries. The Digitization of Historical Magazines project focused on digitizing 2 million pages of CSL historical magazine content, with the content hosted by the Internet Archive. The Digitization Stations project provided stand-alone scanning systems to two libraries – CSL and the San Francisco Public Library - with resulting digital content hosted by the Internet Archive.

Increasing awareness and interest in digitization also resulted in standalone digitization projects during the review, including Digitization of John Muir's Correspondence: Expanding Online Access to Muir's Life and Times by the University of the Pacific. The San Francisco State University San Francisco Bay Area Television Archive (SFBATA) project, A Legacy of cultural revolution: San Francisco's local newsfilm online, 1955-

2003, digitized over 125 hours of local San Francisco news film, including previously unseen news film relating to the experience of Japanese Americans living in Northern California and during internment. Additionally, projects by the Museum of Performance and Design Preserving the California Rock Music Heritage of KSAN Radio, Preserving the Standard Hour Television Broadcast Legacy, and Legacy Oral History Digitization and Public Access focused on digitization of oral history and early television programming resources.

Performance Metrics

The Output measure of 10 additional unique local collections has more than met through the projects above. Systemic data has not been collected on the Outcome regarding an increase in views for LSTA funded digital collections.

Table 18: Performance Metrics for CSL LSTA Plan Goal III Program I

	CSL LSTA PLAN PROJECTION	RESULTS	DATA SOURCE/NOTES
Output	10 unique local collections will be digitized and made available via the web.	Under LHDRP grants, 42 libraries received grants, including public, academic and special libraries, with each grant recipient digitizing up to 200 objects.	LSTA Final Program Reports
Outcome	The number of views of images in LSTA funded collections increase by 20%.	Data not available.

CSL Goal IV: Technological Access for All

Program I: Development and Deployment of Electronic Resources: Work with existing services and/or develop new resources, where necessary, to increase the number of electronic resources that are made available to Californians by libraries of all types.

Projects

The OpenLibrary.org project was funded 2007-2008, 2010 with a total of $723,749 in LSTA funding.

The OpenLibrary.org initiative (www.openlibrary.org), created by the Internet Archive, provided an opportunity for California libraries to participate in its mass digitization project, including development of a user interface to facilitate use by libraries and the general public. It also tested a Scan on Demand pilot but found little use by the participating libraries. Over the first two years of the project, over 1.3 million digital books were available, with over 4 million unique users coming to the site monthly. In 2010, Internet Archive launched a project to provide access to the site for blind and print-disabled users. Versions of digitized books were created in the DAISY format, as well as enabling a “read to ME” text-to-speech feature. As noted in other sections, Internet Archive is also an important partner with other LSTA grants, including The Digitization of Historical Magazines, Digitization Stations and Digitization for the Print Disabled.

The AskNow project was funded 2006- 2010 with a total of $832,229 in LSTA funding.

Ask Now, the statewide virtual reference project, provided a statewide virtual reference service since 1999. In the four years under review (2006-2009), there was a consistent annual decrease in the use of the service from a high of over 52,000 to a low of slightly over 25,000. As the project manager noted in 2009, “The AskNow project was a worthwhile exercise to prove that virtual reference could be done statewide. However, the project never became a major method of delivering information to the end user. Technology has given libraries other options that many are already implementing.” In 2010, funding was provided to ten California public law libraries for use of the service, with data not available until the project completion in 2012.

Performance Metrics

Both the Output and Outcome measures for this Program were associated with county public law libraries projects that were not undertaken; rather, county public law libraries were provided with funding for the AskNow virtual reference service in 2010 but data relating to usage will not be available until July 2012.

Table 19: Performance Metrics for CSL LSTA Plan Goal IV Program I

	CSL LSTA PLAN PROJECTION	RESULTS	DATA SOURCE/NOTES
Output	At least 30 county public law libraries will transform their website to better meet the information needs of their users.	Data not available.
	County public law libraries and other special libraries participating in the website transformation program will experience a 50% increase in website usage.	Data not available.
Outcome	Users of the new websites will report that they are able to find what they need at least 90% of the time.	Data not available.

CSL Goal V: Access and Accessibility

Program II: Access to Resources: Californians have access to the resources and services of the state’s public research library directly and through statewide cooperative library programs.

Projects

The Networking California Library Resources project was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $1,415,240 in LSTA funding.

Networking California Library Resources, managed by the Pacific Library Partnership, supported strategic projects focused on providing access to information and resources for sharing of information and materials among California’s libraries, via cooperative networks.

The Resource Sharing for Californians project was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $4,890,905 in LSTA funding.

Resource Sharing for Californians, a project of CSL, supported the State Library’s resources and services and its important role as a statewide research resource.

Performance Metrics

Per the Output measure, over the five years of the evaluation, both the number of reference queries and interlibrary loans remained static. No data is available regarding the projected Outcome measurement.

Table 20: Performance Metrics for CSL LSTA Plan Goal V Program II

	CSL LSTA PLAN PROJECTION	RESULTS	DATA SOURCE/NOTES

CSL Goal IV: Technological Access for All

Program I: Development and Deployment of Electronic Resources: Work with existing services and/or develop new resources, where necessary, to increase the number of electronic resources that are made available to Californians by libraries of all types.

Projects

The First Source Virtual project was funded 2006-2009 with a total of $1,577,932 in LSTA funding.

First Source Virtual, initiated in 1996, provided document delivery and database support to the California Library Services Act (CLSA) Reference Centers and to AskNow librarians throughout the state of California, as well as to regional network staff working onsite on second level reference at the Los Angeles Public Library. While it had been an ongoing resource utilized by second level reference centers, as the state transitioned to a new reference model, utilization of second level reference services, as well as AskNow, saw a significant decline in use. Starting in 2010, funding ceased for the project as the new statewide reference model, which was developed as an LSTA funded project in 2007-2008, was introduced.

The Help for Hard Times project was funded 2009-2010 with a total of $346,479 in LSTA funding.

Help for Hard Times was an innovative project developed in response to the economic downturn and increase in unemployment in California, starting in 2009. It provided access for public libraries in the greater Los Angeles area and the Bay Area to a career transition database, as well as tools for handling text messaging with patrons and virtual meeting capacity. In 2010 additional projects were launched, including an innovative mobile app Boopsie for libraries and a mobile technology petting zoo to acquaint library staff with new technology products. Anecdotal evidence provided by participating Los Angeles area libraries in 2009 indicated that approximately 60 queries daily were answered by the database, and that for the six libraries participating in the text messaging pilot, that 200 messages were received per month.

The Information Technology Development project was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $1,366,598 in LSTA funding.

The Information Technology Development project at CSL developed and expanded network and electronic communications platforms that facilitated the management of programs and services of benefit to libraries throughout California, as well as improved access to California State Library's (CSL) resources and bibliographic information.

Training projects were hosted in the CSL computer lab and the project also supported quarterly webcasts by the State Librarian to connect with libraries throughout California.

CSL Goal IV: Technological Access for All

Program II: Public Awareness and Training: Encourage local, regional, and statewide projects to raise public awareness about the availability of technological tools and electronic resources both on-site and remotely.

Projects

The Open Source Open Libraries project was funded 2009-2010 with a total of $208,764 in LSTA funding.

Open Source Open Libraries, a project of Califa, created an environment for libraries to explore the functionality of open source software, including workshops, webinars, and vendor discounts. By 2010 eight libraries had completed the migration to an open source system, as well as the development of a single hosted solution for four rural libraries. The project was able to demonstrate clear cost-savings to participating libraries ($105,000 in annual support/maintenance costs).

The WorldCat/CalCat project was funded 2006-2010 with a total of $6,417,794 in LSTA funding.

WorldCat/CalCat was an ambitious project, initiated by CSL and managed by Califa, to increase resource sharing by providing funding to build a statewide OCLC FirstSearch California Libraries Catalog of the holdings of all California public library jurisdictions and make the inventory of the California Libraries Catalog (www.calcat.org) available through OCLC Open WorldCat via the Google and Yahoo search engines on the Internet. Initiated in FY 2004/05, over the span of the project, it became increasingly clear that the model was not being effectively utilized by California public libraries. In a survey conducted in 2007, some of the issues identified by libraries included lack of local technical expertise, the lack of branch level holdings, and a concern about the ability to continue funding the service locally when LSTA funding was discontinued. By 2008, only 55% of libraries had begun batchloading their holdings to OCLC and additional 45% did not know when they would begin to do so. Many smaller libraries felt they lacked the capacity to manage the required record loading. The project was also impacted by the shifting role of OCLC and the implementation of WorldCatLocal. Califa, the project manager, identified the need to develop a cost-sharing model for those libraries actively using WorldCat, but this issue was not pursued. In early 2009 CSL held a series of town hall meetings to consider the future viability of the project, and as result of the input provided at those meetings and a review of performance metrics, funding for the project was eliminated after FY 2010.

IMLS PRIORITY 4: Developing public and private partnerships with other agencies and community-based organizations.

There were no grants specifically coded for Priority 4, as all grants were associated with Priorities that reflected the services supported by the grant. This should not be interpreted to mean that California did not have a major focus on creating community partnerships in support of the grant activities. 314 grants, from 126 libraries, were highlighted as including partnership elements. Public libraries supported 234 partnerships in their grant projects, followed by multi-type libraries (27), academic libraries (22) and special libraries (7). Major targeted grant projects such as California of the Past Digital Storytelling Program (DST), California's Family Place Library Program, Early Learning with Families, Local History Digital Resources Project (LHDRP) were all identified as partnership projects.

Many Eureka grants, TLA50 grants, and "Pitch An Idea" had partnerships as central elements for their projects. Examples include:

- The Youth Summer Camp 2010 project, a Eureka grant at the San Diego County Library, partnered with The Braille Institute of San Diego and Challenge Center of La Mesa to provide programs that promote independent living for the visually impaired and physically disabled welcoming them to the Lemon Grove Library community. (2009-CA-35722-36863)
- The Write to Read: Ashland Reads project, a "Pitch An Idea" grant by the Alameda County Library, which collaborated with Mercy Housing to establish library-linked technology centers in three of Mercy Housing's low-income apartment complexes in the Ashland neighborhood of central Alameda County. (2010-CA-39077)
- We've Only Just Begun: Learning and Leisure, a TLA50 project at the Sunnyvale Public Library, which worked with community organizations to identify volunteer speakers and created a Volunteer Speakers' Bureau, as well as providing over 40 programs to over 2,500 people. (2008-CA-32138-32161)

The concept of community partnerships has seen a significant increase in competitive grants over the last two years, as well as in targeted grant projects Eureka and TLA50. A significant number of these partnership grants combined OBE metrics also, thereby combining two IMLS areas of focus.

IMLS PRIORITY 5: Targeting library services to individuals of diverse geographic, cultural, and socioeconomic backgrounds, to individuals with disabilities, and to individuals with limited functional literacy or information skills.

Overview of CSL Grants in Priority 5

IMLS Priority 5 represents 64 grants totaling over $16 million, representing 6% of all grants, and 19% of all funds awarded. The following tables capture an overview of the grants in this Priority.

IMLS Priority 5 Evaluation Findings by CSL Goals and Programs

CSL Goal I: Literacy and Educational Support

Program I: Improve Library Literacy Services: Demonstrate techniques to improve adult and family literacy skills through public libraries, building on an in-place, state supported program.

Projects

CSL had had a long and storied history in support of library based adult literacy programs, which were originally initiated using Library Services and Construction Act (LSCA) funding on a cost sharing basis with local libraries, and continues today. Both the California Library Literacy Services (CLLS)/AmeriCorps Initiative and Literacy Initiatives project support California Library Literacy Services (CLLS).

The California Library Literacy Services (CLLS)/AmeriCorps Initiative project was funded 2006-2009 with a total of $505,191 in LSTA funding.

The Americorps Initiative provided matching funds for Corporation for National Community Service grants for AmeriCorps members to work in local library literacy programs, while the local libraries provided additional matching funds for member costs. Through the Americorps initiative, 219 Americorps members served at 32 library based literacy programs, enhancing program services by participation in projects such as Easy Voter Guide workshops and pioneered in developing a Family Health Literacy curriculum in 2008. The Corporation for National Service Americorps grant was not renewed in 2008, and so the LSTA grant was discontinued.

The Literacy Initiatives project was funded 2006-20010 with a total of $1,759,992 in LSTA funding.

The Literacy Initiative project provided funding for education and training for staff, volunteers and adult learners, development of training and resource materials, and the continued support of an OBE assessment project.

The Literacy and Workforce Development Initiative project was funded in 2009 with a total of $299,108 in LSTA funding.

The Literacy and Workforce Development Initiative provided targeted grants to 14 California public libraries with adult literacy programs, located in California counties where the unemployment rate and low literacy rate were higher than the state average. The grants provided funds to purchase laptop computers to increase Internet access for workforce development of library patrons, access to an online career tool called JobNow, and a support grant to provide training and resources to those libraries in developing programs. Since the grant project began in the last quarter of the grant fiscal year no Output or Outcome measures were available at the time that the final project reports were submitted.

Additional single focus grants expanded the literacy resources available to California libraries, including the Inspired Learning Partners Enhancing Literacy Services (ILPELS) at the Santa Clara County Library, Huntington Beach Public Library and Watsonville Public Library and bilingual projects such as the ones pioneered by the Mixteco Project at the Oxnard Public Library and the Native Language Literacy Program by the Hayward Public Library at a day laborer center. Projects from the Eureka program, as well as “Pitch An Idea” projects, also included literacy components.

Performance Metrics

Since both of the major, ongoing LSTA grant projects – Americorps and Literacy Initiatives - are inextricably mixed with the overall CLLS program, the Outputs and Outcomes for the Program are those that are created and measured by CLLS with its Roles and Goals metrics. While CLLS does not compile multi-year data, based on the data from FY 2010/11, the following metrics are available.

Table 25: Performance Metrics for CSL LSTA Plan Goal I Program I

	CSL LSTA PLAN PROJECTION	RESULTS	DATA SOURCE/NOTES

CSL Goal I: Literacy and Educational Support

Program III: Promote Reading: Support library programs that promote the value of reading and the library’s role as a place to acquire and discuss books

Projects

The Dia de los Ninos/Dia de los Libros project was funded in 2006-2010 with a total of $226,326 in LSTA funding.

The Dia de los Ninos/Dia de los Libros (Day of the Child/Day of the Books) project developed during the five years of the review from a concept that was just in the development phase to a robust program celebrating the life-changing power of books, reading and libraries, especially among Latino and bilingual communities. Over 20,000 adults and children attended programs in over 40 libraries throughout the state, which included giveaways of bilingual children’s books. In 2010 the project was expanded to include Tagalog, Korean, Chinese, and Japanese, as well as Spanish, languages and Indian/Pakistani, Native American and Filipino, as well as Hispanic, cultures.

Additional reading focused grant projects were funded during the review period, including three Eureka projects in 2008.

Performance Metrics

The Output metric of 45,000 Californians was not met by the Dia de los Ninos/Dia de los Libros; however, it is likely that the metric was met or exceeded as a result of other LSTA funded bilingual, non Dia de los Ninos/Dia de los Libros library events. Outcome metrics were not created by the grant.

CSL Goal V: Access and Accessibility

Program I: Access to Library Services: Californians unable to use standard print will have access to library services.

Projects

The Library Services for Californians Unable to Use Standard Print project was funded in 2006-2010 with a total of $11,931,253 in LSTA funding.

The Library Services for Californians Unable to Use Standard Print grant supports the Braille and Talking Book Library in Sacramento (the northern California regional library) and the Braille Institute in Los Angeles. Statistics indicate that the number of users remained stable during this period of time, and did not increase by 25%. For example in Northern California the number of people establishing service was 7,411 and the number of people discontinuing service was 6,383 during the five-year period. No Outcome metrics were created for the grant.

IMLS PRIORITY 6: Targeting library and information services to persons having difficulty using a library and to underserved urban and rural communities, including children (from birth through age 17) from families with incomes below the poverty line (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget and revised annually in accordance with section 9902(2) of title 42) applicable to a family of the size involved.

IMLS Priority 6
Evaluation Findings by CSL Goals and Programs

CSL Goal II: Responsive Changes in Library Services

Program I: Assist and support libraries in projects that address the learning and cultural needs of diverse populations.

Projects

The Rural Library Initiative project was funded in 2006-2010 with a total of $1,235,985 in LSTA funding.

The Rural Library Initiative, renamed the Library Access and Innovation Fund - California Rural and Tribal Communities in 2010, provided needed services and resources to over 300 California rural and tribal libraries. A variety of training programs for library staff (both on ground and virtual) were developed, supported by the development of the innovative Range Rider Training Program. Other projects coordinated with other LSTA funded initiatives such as ELF, SRP, CPP and Infopeople. In 2010 there was an enhanced focus on tribal libraries. In the last two years of the grant, it was designated as an OBE project. Outcome results were reflected in both library metrics:

- 100% of 2010 attendees and 95% of 2011 attendees at the Association of Rural and Small Libraries (ARSL) conference reported implementing new programs and services, changing procedures for existing services, and acquisitions of new materials based on knowledge gained at the conference.

as well as community metrics:

- Siskiyou County officials, community members, library staff and library volunteers all have increased their knowledge of library service models. Community support has increased at all 11 libraries in Siskiyou County; community members feel they have more control over the levels of library services and programs in their communities.

SUMMARY AND RECOMMENDATIONS

As can be noted from the Evaluation Findings above, the California State Library, and its grantee agencies, have very effectively leveraged the use of LSTA funds over the five years under review to support significant improvements and changes in library services, as well as positively impacting the library user community. Successes can be seen in the increasing participation by libraries throughout the state in a wide variety of projects, the use of partners such as Califa, Infopeople, and the University of California to strategically move initiatives forward, and the development of dynamic, forward looking projects in diverse areas ranging from digital content development to services to underserved communities.

As with any multi-faceted program such as the LSTA program, there are inevitably lessons to be learned from such an evaluative process as this. Recommendations in key areas are included below.

1. CSL effectively updated their application and reporting processes during the review period. The results can be clearly seen in the more informative data and results reporting in the Final Reports over the last two years under review (FY 2009/10, FY 2010/11), including the requirement to include both Outputs and Outcomes. Additionally, CSL is now positioned to launch an online system which will not only address the need to move all communications and data to a digital platform, but also assist in the utilization of performance metrics for ongoing program management.

Recommendation:

- Implement the online application and reporting system as soon as feasible.
 - Continue to update the online system regularly to reflect changes in data reporting requirements by IMLS.
2. The implementation of the “Pitch An Idea” process for competitive grants has resulted in a significant increase in local library participation in LSTA projects, a greater appreciation and understanding of OBE, and an expansion of community partnerships for the grant projects. This process has been very well received by the California library community, with the effectiveness of the process enhanced by the close working relationship between the grantee agency and the assigned Library Development Services (LDS) consultant, as well as the improved application and reporting processes.

Recommendation:

- Continue the “Pitch An Idea” competitive grant process.
- Consider the expansion of the process to other appropriate targeted grant programs.

3. Participants in targeted grants programs such ELF and FPL commented that broader implementation options would be helpful and could also serve to broaden the interest in such programs to more libraries. In implementing such programs, CSL should consider including more flexible options for programmatic implementation, while at the same time meeting overall programmatic goals.

Recommendation:

- In implementation of new targeted programs, investigate broader implementation options and methodologies to open up participation to a broader community of libraries.
4. One of the significant challenges faced by CSL was the frequent late passage of the State Budget, which prevented the release of LSTA funds to grantee agencies. Passage of the State budget was delayed 85 days in 2008 and 100 days in 2010. For many grantee agencies forced to wait for the funding to become available locally, this caused a late start up of such one year projects, effectively compressing the timeframe in which to achieve results, as well as to demonstrate Outcomes. CSL worked with grantee agencies to modify project elements in some of these cases. While the 2011 budget bill was signed in a timely manner, in large part due to a new requirement linking legislative pay to the timely passage of a budget, given the serious fiscal shortfalls expected in this and coming fiscal years, this may once again become an issue for grantee agencies.

Recommendation:

- In the case of late release of project funds, continue to work with grantee agencies, as necessary, to modify project components if it will not be possible to achieve them in the compressed time frame.
5. Management of the LSTA program by CSL staff was challenged by the reduction in staffing levels in the LDS division, as well as by the retirement of many senior staff in the division with significant background and expertise in LSTA operations, even while the number of LSTA grants awarded annually was increasing. With the significant number of grants awarded annually (1,077 over 5 years) this will likely continue to be a challenge. However, significant improvement was seen in the data sets created annually for the State Program Report (SPR), in part because of a new reporting system for the SPR implemented in the last two years of the review period. The enhanced systemic review of key data elements for the SPR by consultants assigned to each project will help insure clean data over a multi-year period, preventing issues such coding multi-year priority initiatives to different State Plan Goals in different years. The implementation of the online application and reporting system may help address both the reduced staffing challenge and the data issues.

Recommendation:

- Implement the online system.
 - Continue the closer working relationship between LDS consultants and grantees.
 - Insure linkage between the data elements in the application and reports to data required in the SPR.
 - Ensure comprehensive data review by LDS consultants familiar with both the grants and the Outputs and Outcomes included in the LSTA State Plan.
6. The linkage of project performance metrics and Outcomes to those included in the CSL LSTA Five Year Plan was clearly problematic. In few cases was there a clear linkage between what was included in the Plan and data that was created or collected by grantee agencies. While the LSTA application requires that a specific State Plan Goal be selected for each project, it does not require a linkage to a specific Program under the Goal selected; however, both Output and Outcome measurements are linked at the Program, not Goal, level in the State Plan. In many cases, it would appear that grantee agencies were unaware of the specific Output or Outcome measurements for the State Plan Program applicable to their project. Even in cases where there was effective linkage between the grant projects and the State Plan, e.g. outcome targets for Goal I, Program I on library literacy services, such data is only collected annually and not aggregated on a multi-year basis.

When CSL had access to performance metrics, they were able to utilize them effectively to make programmatic changes, as with the discontinuation of the WorldCat/CalCat and First Source Virtual projects due to low usage and changing service models.

As noted earlier, there was significant development in expertise in the OBE arena during the time period under review. At the time that the Plan was originally created (2007) and revised (2008) both CSL and the library community were becoming more proficient in the use of OBE and so early Outcomes included in the Plan were often not ones that were subsequently measured by projects. There were some good examples of the use of performance metrics e.g. CPP use of pre and post testing of training participants on Outcomes, but it was not always clear that the project managers were aware of the specific Outcomes included in the related Plan Program for their project. Additionally some Outcomes need to be more closely allied with real world value, e.g. an Outcome that measures a more positive attitude towards the library is not as effective as an Outcome that can link participation in a specific library project to enhanced personal capacity that is valued by the individual or the community. Just because there is a perceived more positive, albeit amorphous, feeling about the library does not necessarily translate into perceived real world value by stakeholders.

When there was data reporting at either/both the Output and Outcome level, it does not appear that there was an overall systemic effort to aggregate such data over multiple years related to the State Plan in order to determine trends and to guide policy and administrative decision making at CSL. While such an effort requires a commitment of scarce resources, the results can be extremely helpful, not only in times of abundant resources, but perhaps even more importantly in times of constrained resources.

Recommendation:

- Continue efforts to develop OBE expertise at both the state and local level, including awareness of the value and use of such data.
 - Link all grant projects to the appropriate IMLS priority, LSTA Goal and Program at the application stage.
 - Insure that grantee agencies are aware of the specific Outputs and Outcomes in the LSTA Plan Goal/Program that relate to their project.
 - Make the data creation and reporting (on Six Month and Final Reports) of performance metrics the responsibility of the grantee agency, including any necessary aggregation of such metrics for multi-year projects.
 - Create both Outputs and Outcomes in the new LSTA Five Year Plan in conjunction with both LDS staff and library community stakeholders who are either familiar with the Goal/Program area, or who will be involved with ongoing priority LSTA funded projects, e.g. Outcomes and Outputs for staff training developed cooperatively with Infopeople, as well as PLSEP.
 - Insure that performance metrics have real-world value, e.g. can the Outcome/impact be translated in a way that is meaningful to stakeholders, both in the community and at the policy maker level.
 - Explore the creation and reporting of meaningful performance metrics for ongoing statewide priority projects, such as Califa.
 - Review the performance metrics collected for the past Five Year Plan– either successfully or incompletely – when developing the metrics for the new Five Year Plan.
 - Aggregate multi-year data annually, in order to evaluate trends, for all Outputs and Outcomes included in the LSTA Five Year Plan, as well as for multi-year targeted and priority projects.
 - Develop and utilize a useful data mining process with the new online system for use with performance metrics.
 - Institute an ongoing annual review process for the prior LSTA year, in conjunction with the preparation of the SPR, which includes a review of performance data, with involvement from the library community.
7. One of the regular comments made in both the stakeholder interviews and survey was a lack of awareness of the wide variety of programs funded by LSTA and interest in learning more about them, partially in order to consider similar models for local libraries. There is a tremendous opportunity for a positive effect on CSL by greater awareness of the breadth and impact of LSTA funded initiatives. The information available on the CSL website about the LSTA program has improved with recent revisions, but there is still opportunity to market both the program and the results to not only the California library community but also library stakeholders, including patrons and policymakers statewide.

Recommendation

- Continue efforts to more broadly market both availability of LSTA grants and the impact of such grants.
 - Consider the implementation of models that allow sharing of project results – webinars, audio-conferences, blogs, roundtables, poster sessions – to both market the program, as well as provide access to libraries wanting to replicate projects locally.
 - Share the Five Year Evaluation with the library community to enhance transparency concerning the use of LSTA funds and the significant impact of LSTA funded projects on local library services.
 - Develop and implement an annual reporting methodology, in a user friendly format, reporting on the progress in meeting the goals in the State LSTA Plan, including reporting of performance metrics, and the positive impact on local library services, and disseminate awareness to the California library community and library stakeholder and policymakers.
8. The discussions of OBE in the Evaluation Finding section and the Recommendations above identify some of the key successes and challenges experienced by CSL and California libraries over the past five years. In summary, they are:
- Upward trending in the use of OBE
 - Improved training in the use of OBE
 - Continuing need for improvement in field knowledge and understanding of the effective use of OBE
 - Need to create systemic linkage between LSTA plan outcomes and OBE metrics
 - Integration of the use of OBE/performance metrics into policy and administrative decision-making
 - Expansion of OBE to priority programs

The key success in the development of the use of OBE that could be useful to other states was the close working relationship between LDS consultants and “Pitch An Idea” grant recipients that required the development of OBE components during the application development phase, as well as the development of the OBE checklist for applicant use. OBE clearly continues to be a more difficult evaluative concept for much of the library community to grasp. However, there is increasing evidence that, for those libraries that invest the time and attention in developing and measuring effective Outcomes and understand how to use them with community stakeholders and policymakers, it is perceived as an integral part of a successful program.

The specific Output and Outcome metrics are developed in conjunction with each state's specific LSTA Plan, which by nature of the diversity of each state's library focus will inevitably vary. However, since each plan has a clear linkage to the specific Priorities set by IMLS, working with other states and comparing Outputs and Outcomes in similar Priority areas should assist in beginning the process of identifying national indicators that can be measured consistently across states.

Another key issue is the potential need for changing Outputs and Outcomes during the years covered by the Plan. A process is in place to allow major changes to a state's LSTA Plan. However, as opportunities and foci change during a five year period, it would be helpful to be able to change Outputs and Outcomes to reflect these changes, without changing the entire Plan.

Recommendation

- Continue training and development with the library community on OBE.
- Share new OBE process with larger library community.
- Participate in development of national indicators.
- Develop a process for revise Outputs and Outcomes for the State Plan during the five years covered by the Plan, dependent on changing foci or opportunities.

NEW FIVE YEAR PLAN

The California State Library is currently engaged with the California library community in developing a new Five Year Plan for the use of LSTA funds. Town Hall meetings, combined with the use of IdeaScale, have provided multiple opportunities for input. This Five Year Evaluation has also provided some key directions for the new Plan.

1. The California library community expects CSL to provide digital leadership in this fast-changing arena that is so critical to the future of libraries. In developing the new plan, a broad-based Goal should be included that will allow LSTA funds to be used flexibly, given the changing nature of opportunities.
2. With much of the focus on digital content and creation, and since significant resources were expended in this area during the current Plan, linkage of appropriate Plan elements to the development of the Digital Public Library of America should be included.
3. Given the potential for LSTA funding constraints in future years, difficult decisions may need to be made on types of grant projects – statewide, targeted, competitive – and strategic focus. While the statewide grant programs have historically supported major initiatives successfully both at CSL and for the broader library community, the increasing success of local initiatives – particularly those supported through TLA50, Eureka and “Pitch An Idea” - needs to be valued. The competitive grant program should not be eliminated, particularly since it serves as the incubator for dynamic developments in new library programs and services, as well as a forerunner to targeted and statewide programs. The successful impact of local projects frequently carries a greater bearing on stakeholder and policymaker support for ongoing funding.
4. Given the inclusion in LSTA of the following new purpose - Enhance the skills of the current library workforce and to recruit future professionals to the field of library and information services – include a specific Goal for training and development for library staff. Given the significant percentage of funds expended in the current plan in this area (nearly 13%), this will provide a clear focus in the area and with Outputs and Outcomes.
5. Three statewide projects receive consistent praise from the library community – Infopeople, Califa and the California Summer Reading Program. These projects have shown enduring viability, combined with an exceptional ability to move quickly to address changing conditions and priorities. With the ongoing fiscal constraints faced by all libraries in the state, access to staff development, shared programming and value added services provided by these projects will be more important than ever.

6. While the California State Library has been extremely judicious in using LSTA funds to support CSL programs and services, currently LSTA funds are used to fully fund the Braille and Talking Book Library in Sacramento and Braille Institute in Los Angeles. No state funds support either service. Given the potential for future funding constraints, consideration must be given to the percentage of funding that should be shared by the state for these services.
7. While much of the focus for libraries today is on technology and digital futures, the reality remains that libraries will continue to serve as important cultural, literary and historical repositories for our society. As such, there is a responsibility to both create and preserve access to these resources, either digitally or physically. LSTA funds have been effectively utilized to support preservation, digitization and content creation projects and should have a place in continued funding.

A look at the demographic changes in California will also be instructive in the development of the new Plan. California, as the most populous state in the nation, often serves as a bellwether for demographic changes nationally. Conversely, with the continuing fast pace of demographic diversity and change in California, libraries are often challenged to adapt service programs to changing community needs. In 2011, CSL commissioned a study “Understanding California’s Demographic Shifts” by the Stanford Center on Longevity, to facilitate greater understanding of how demographic characteristics differ across the state and to provide local demographic information so that library managers can adapt their practices and strategies to the changing demographics of their particular communities. The Executive Summary of the study is attached as Appendix 15, and the full study is available at <http://www.library.ca.gov/lds/demographicprofiles/index.html>.

This seminal study provides a fascinating picture of the demographic shifts in California over the past decade, including some of the following top line data:

- The white, non-Hispanic population peaked at 17.0 million in 1990 and has since declined by 12%, falling to 15.0 million in 2010. In contrast, the Hispanic population increased from 7.7 million in 1990 to 14.0 million in 2010. Since 1990, the Hispanic share of California's total population has increased from 26% to 38%. The white, non-Hispanic share decreased from a majority 57% in 1990 to 47% in 2000 and 40% in 2010.
- Another shift in the population mix occurred as the Asian population grew from 2.7 million in 1990 to 4.8 million in 2010, increasing from 9% of California's total population to 13%.
- In contrast to high growth in the Hispanic and Asian populations, the black population in California increased by just 3% from the 1990 level to 2.2 million in 2010. The black share of California’s total population declined from 7% in 1990 to less than 6% in 2010.

- While California's total population increased by 10%, the Hispanic population increased by 28%.
- Overall, the working-age population increased by 2.5 million (13%) from 2000 to 2010 and accounted for nearly three-quarters of the total population gain.
- In contrast, the population age 65+ grew at a faster rate, 18%, but added only 650,000, bringing the total population age 65+ to 4.2 million.
- The number of young people, those under 20, grew by only 2% adding just 217,000.
- California's total population is aging but still growing. Median age is 35, up from 33 in 2000. Young people age 0 to 19 account for 28% of total population, down from 30% in 2000. The working-age population increased to 61% of total population and the population age 65+ remained at 11%. The number of young people increased by 2% over the past decade. Total population increased by 10%.

Appendix Notes:

1. Some Appendices will note $0 LSTA funding for a specific grant project. These grant projects are considered “Parent” projects, which serve as umbrella projects for “Child” projects. The grantee agency for the Parent project does not receive any direct funds for the grant project, with funds being dispersed to Child agencies for the specific projects.
2. In order to analyze data for the study, a simple coding system was created to provide a distinct number for each CSL goal/program. For example, State Goal II, Program I it is coded as 4. The Table below cross-references the original program numbers with the unique coded numbers used in the Tables in the Appendices.

Appendix 9: Grants with Changes in CSL State Plan Goal

In order to insure appropriate evaluation of grants, some grants were recoded from the original state plan goals with which they were associated to goals more closely aligned to the actual grant purpose.

Grants awarded in FY 2006/07 and FY 2007/08 were all associated with goals in the prior California State Library LSTA Plan 2002-2007. Goals for these grants were recoded for the appropriate goals in the California State Library LSTA Plan 2008-2012. It may appear that the old state goal numbers for some of these grants are the same as the new state goal numbers: however, while the numbers are the same, the actual goals associated with the grants differ. As example, Goal 1 in the FY 2002-2007 plan was “Provide equitable access to lifelong learning”, in the FY 2008-2012 Plan Goal 1 is “Literacy and educational support”.

Additionally, some grants in FY 2008/09, FY 2009/10 and FY 2010/11 were also recoded to new state goals to correct original coding errors. Recoding of grants also insured that multi-year projects were all evaluated under the same goal.

CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARY MISSION

The California State Library is California's public research library that helps a diverse people, their governments, and their libraries meet their knowledge and information needs.

The Library Development Services Bureau of the California State Library administers the LSTA program to serve California's libraries and networks of all types with grants, statewide programs, and technical assistance so that

- Libraries throughout California can effectively support their current and potential users and meet the needs of their diverse communities;
- All Californians have equitable access to the widest array of library and information services; and
- Individuals and communities are empowered to reach their fullest potential.

PLAN OVERVIEW

The California State Library conducted an extensive needs assessment of all key library stakeholders in order to determine the statewide priorities for this LSTA Five-Year Plan 2008-2012. As a result of web-based surveys, interviews and meetings with constituent groups, four themes emerged as priorities:

- All Californians have access to information and learning opportunities that help them be successful.
- Libraries have the resources to develop programs and services that are responsive to changing needs of Californians.
- Libraries are able to create and support digital preservation projects that enable long-term access to California Information.
- Libraries provide access to a wide variety of electronic resources, training for users, and are a resource for patrons for learning about and using new information technologies.

This plan serves to address these themes through five goals and programs that relate to the purposes of LSTA as outlined in Act, 20 USC Sec. 9141.

GOALS AND PROGRAMS

The goals below are ranked in priority order based on the results of the needs assessment. Each goal includes the LSTA purpose addressed by the goal, the relevant needs identified in the assessment, representative programs and activities to achieve the goal with key output targets and key outcome targets for each program. All goals and programs will be supported with essential training components to ensure success. It should be noted that the outputs, outcomes, and programs include only a portion of the activities that will support each goal during the next five years.

GOAL I: LITERACY AND EDUCATIONAL SUPPORT

California libraries provide equitable access to literacy and learning opportunities so that all Californians can be successful in all of life's endeavors.

LSTA Purpose Addressed by this Goal:

- Expanding services for learning and access to information and educational resources in a variety of formats, in all types of libraries, for individuals of all ages.
- Developing public and private partnerships with other agencies and community-based organizations.
- Targeting library services to individuals of diverse geographic, cultural, and socioeconomic backgrounds, to individuals with disabilities, and to individuals with limited functional literacy or information skills.

Needs Identified in the Assessment:

During the needs assessment a common theme was supporting the educational needs of Californians as related to functional literacy, family literacy, and homework assistance.

GOAL II: RESPONSIVE CHANGES IN LIBRARY SERVICES

California libraries will develop programs and services that meet the changing information and learning needs of their communities.

LSTA Purpose Addressed by this Goal:

- Expanding services for learning and access to information and educational resources in a variety of formats, in all types of libraries, for individuals of all ages;
- Developing public and private partnerships with other agencies and community-based organizations

Needs identified in the assessment:

Participants in the statewide needs assessment clearly identified the priority for libraries to have the resources needed to develop programs that support the changing information and learning needs of their diverse populations. This would include projects like developing programs and services for targeted populations like new retirees, Baby Boomers and teens, and providing electronic resources and services that support local needs.

Goal II, Program I:

Assist and support libraries in projects that address the learning and cultural needs of diverse populations. Timeframe: 2008-2012.

Activities:

- Create and support new models for supporting the unique needs of generational populations.
- Support libraries in their development of local programming and services that address specific needs in their community.
- Provide opportunities for staff to learn and use new models and techniques for developing programming to meet community needs.

Key Outcome Target:

- By June 2012, 65% of participants in library programs will report that the program offered by their library supported their needs.

Goal II, Program II:

Support demonstration projects that model and test innovative technological solutions for improving library services that are more responsive to local needs.

Activities:

- Design and support statewide and local initiatives that pilot innovative solutions for providing information to users.
- Provide opportunities for staff to learn and use new technologies for the development of new programming and services.

Key Output Target:

- By June 2012, 15 demonstration projects will be implemented, evaluated and shared statewide as model programs for replication.

GOAL III: DIGITAL PRESERVATION AND RESOURCE SHARING

California libraries have the resources to develop digital projects that preserve and enhance access to valuable local content.

Needs identified in the assessment:

Participants in the needs assessment process acknowledged the emerging role of libraries as local content creators and providers. Many libraries have collections of unique local content that if digitized would help not only in preservation, but increase access. Libraries need assistance in developing plans, acquiring resources, and making their content available electronically.

LSTA Purpose Addressed by this Goal:

- Developing library services that provide all users access to information through local, state, regional, national, and international electronic networks;
- Developing public and private partnerships with other agencies and community-based organizations

Goal III, Program I:

Digitizing Library Resources: Assist libraries in their efforts to digitize library resources in all formats, in a standard manner that allows statewide compatibility in both the images and the records describing them. Timeframe: 2008-2012.

Activities:

- Develop a statewide program that supports the digitization of local collections through training, outsourcing opportunities and funding so they can be preserved and more accessible to the public.
- Support libraries in the development of local oral history collections in digital formats.

Key Output Target:

- By June 2010, 10 unique local collections will be digitized and made available via the web.

Key Outcome Target:

- By June 2012, the number of views of images in LSTA funded collections increase by 20%.

GOAL IV: TECHNOLOGICAL ACCESS FOR ALL

California libraries provide electronic resources and efforts to improve their users' understanding and use of electronic library resources and services through development of, increased access to, and training about technology-based systems and resources.

LSTA Purpose Addressed by this Goal:

- Developing library services that provide all users access to information through local, state, regional, national, and international electronic networks.
- Provide electronic and other linkages between and among all types of libraries.
- Targeting library services to individuals of diverse geographic, cultural, and socioeconomic backgrounds, to individuals with disabilities, and to individuals with limited functional literacy or information skills.

Needs identified in the assessment:

The needs assessment identified the need for libraries to continue to make user-friendly and accessible resources available for their community. It is also important for libraries to continue to develop their role as learning centers for how to use emerging technologies that can enhance their users' ability to meet their information needs.

Goal IV, Program I:

Development and Deployment of Electronic Resources: Work with existing services and/or develop new resources, where necessary, to increase the number of electronic resources that are made available to Californians by libraries of all types. Timeframe: 2008-2011.

Activities:

- Provide training and support for librarians to improve electronic access to library resources and services.
- Create and evaluate statewide models for providing electronic access to information for Californians.

Key Output Target:

Key Outcome Target:

- By June 2012, 75% of the people participating in library-based training programs will evaluate the sessions as successful in improving their technological skills and knowledge of electronic resources available through the library.

GOAL V: ACCESS AND ACCESSIBILITY

All Californians regardless of geographic location, socioeconomic status, and/or disabilities will have access to a variety of state and locally developed services that assist them in improving their skills, knowledge, status, and life condition.

LSTA Purpose Addressed by this Goal:

- Developing library services that provide all users access to information through local, state, regional, national, and international electronic networks;
- Targeting library services to individuals of diverse geographic, cultural, and socioeconomic backgrounds, to individuals with disabilities, and to individuals with limited functional literacy or information skills; and

- Targeting library and information services to persons having difficulty using a library and to underserved urban and rural communities, including children from families with incomes below the poverty line.

Needs identified in the assessment:

During the needs assessment there were four key areas identified as important: 1) Improving services for people with disabilities, 2) rural and tribal library services development, 3) serve clients with special needs, and 4) ensuring access to statewide resources.

Key Output Target:

- By 2012, 25% increase in the use of the state library's public research materials.

- By 2012, 25% of customers report increased awareness of benefits and services of the state library's public research materials.

Goal V, Program III

Skills for Service: California's Libraries staffs have the knowledge and skills needed to support valuable programs and services for their communities as they relate to the priorities of LSTA.

Activities:

- Provide learning opportunities in multiple formats for libraries – urban, rural, and tribal - to ensure they have trained and qualified staff to support their communities' needs.

Key Output Target:

- From 2008-2012, annually, a minimum of 4,000 participants will attend learning opportunities to improve their skills for serving their communities. Key Outcome Target:

- By 2012, 50% of staff who attend learning opportunities will report and demonstrate new attitudes and skills in their delivery of library and information services to their community.

- By 2012, 200 libraries will have a disaster preparedness recovery plan.

- By 2012, 90% of participants in preservation and disaster preparedness/recovery learning opportunities will report that they have a greater appreciation for the need for a disaster preparedness and recovery plan for their library.

PLANNING AND IMPLEMENTATION

The following summarizes the stakeholder involvement, communication and monitoring procedures that the California State Library instituted for the development, review, and implementation of its 2008-2012 Five-year Plan.

Stakeholder Involvement

Libraries and users as stakeholders:

- Five Special Libraries Association chapters (Southern California, San Andreas, San Diego, San Francisco, Sierra Nevada)
- California State Department of Education
- Four academic library groups (University of California system, California State University system, Community College system, private California academic colleges)
- Public library directors
- California Library Trustees and Commissioners (CALTAC) members
- CLSA System Advisory Boards (public-at-large)

These stakeholders were asked to give input via a web-based survey on directions for the next five years of LSTA funding support. They were given the previous goals together with the original strategies to achieve them. They were then asked to rate them on a scale of 1-6 (6 being the highest) as to the importance of continuing LSTA support for them during the next five years. Additional recommendations for revised and/or new goals and strategies were also sought.

Library of California Board (State Advisory Council)

This board represents stakeholders at the state level and consists of nine members appointed by the Governor and four by the Legislature. The board determines policy for and authorizes allocation of funds from programs of the California Library Services Act (CLSA) and also comprises the State Advisory Council on Libraries for LSTA. The composition of the state board represents public libraries, school libraries, academic libraries, special libraries, and the general public, as provided for in the Library of California Act. Although they are not specifically designated as Board members, the interests of institutional libraries and libraries serving people with disabilities are represented. The State Librarian serves as Chief Executive Officer of the Library of California Board.

The State Board was asked to provide input on directions for the next five years of LSTA funding support in a process similar to that described above for other stakeholders. State Library staff also reported on the status of the draft plan, including preliminary goals, to the Board.

The Five-Year Plan will be presented to the members of the State Board for review and feedback on an annual basis.

Communication

Once the Five-year Plan has been approved by the Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS), it will be published on the California State Library website and in print form for selected stakeholders, including the Library of California Board. The State Librarian will announce the IMLS approval of the plan and where it can be found on statewide discussion lists, through direct email announcements to library directors, and on the State Librarian's regularly scheduled webcast. Throughout the period of the Five-Year Plan it will continue to be available to visitors to the website, providing access to all types of libraries and their users. A mechanism for sending comments or questions to the State Library via the website will be in place.

The Five-Year Plan will be an agenda item in regularly scheduled orientations for new library directors presented by the State Library.

If appropriate stakeholders and the State Library determine that any part of the Five-Year Plan requires substantial revision, all proposed changes will first be reviewed by the library and user communities before being submitted to IMLS according to the provisions of the LSTA.

The State Library will publicize completion of outputs and outcomes specified in the Five-Year Plan, as well as other important program benchmarks, through press releases, emails, announcements on the Library's website, and announcements on the State Librarian's regularly-scheduled webcast. Results also will be reported in the required annual State Report to IMLS.

California libraries applying for all LSTA subgrants will be directed to the Five-Year Plan and will be required to review it and cite goals relevant to the proposed project as part of the application process.

Monitoring

The California State Library's Library Development Services (LDS) Bureau will be responsible for monitoring ongoing implementation of the Five-Year Plan through sub grant activities and will prepare appropriate reports as required. This will include ensuring that all LSTA sub grant projects are consistent with at least one of the goals of the Plan through periodic communication with sub grantees, site visits, and review of quarterly and final project reports.

LDS staff will conduct an annual appraisal of the progress in attaining the Five- Year Plan goals and will adjust sub grant programs as needed.

This project was supported in whole by the U.S. Institute of Museum and Library Services under the provisions of the Library Services and Technology Act, administered in California by the State Librarian. The opinions expressed herein do not necessarily reflect the position or policy of the U.S. Institute of Museum and Library Services or the California State Library, and no official endorsement by the U.S. Institute of Museum and Library Services or the California State Library should be inferred.

Introduction

The California State Library has an expressed goal of adopting innovative methods for meeting the knowledge and information needs of a diverse population. Understanding California's changing demographics will be critical for effectively delivering innovative library services and for accomplishing the State Library's strategic goals. In particular, understanding demographic changes will enable the California State Library to better meet the needs of diverse constituents, to reach more Californians, and to leverage scarce resources.

This project, "Understanding California's Demographic Shifts," was developed to facilitate greater understanding of how demographic characteristics differ across the state and to provide local demographic information so that library managers can adapt their practices and strategies to the changing demographics of their particular communities.

To do this, the Stanford Center on Longevity developed Demographic Profiles for the 183 library jurisdictions in the state. The profiles include charts and data tables covering key demographic variables, including population growth, age structure, racial and ethnic mix, household type, income, and educational attainment. To facilitate comparative analysis and identification of patterns across the state, we used a standard template for all the jurisdictions. Each profile incorporates data from the 2010 Census to illustrate the ten-year population shifts, and data from the five-year American Community Survey, 2005-09, for other variables, such as education, income, and immigration. By focusing specifically on library jurisdictions, most of which coincide with city or county boundaries, we were able to illustrate demographic characteristics that are not always evident when looking at larger regions.

The following sections of the report are designed to help the library managers identify distinctive demographic shifts and characteristics:

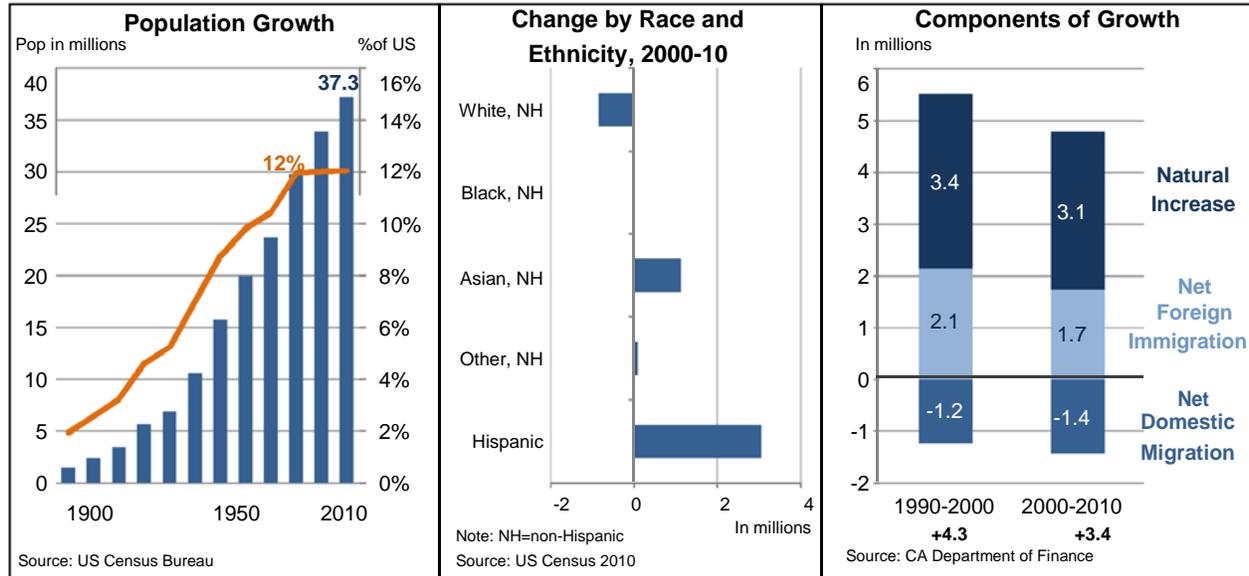

- The "California Demographic Overview" introduces the project and provides a broad context for understanding the library jurisdiction profiles.
- The overview is followed by a section called "Drawing Implications from the Demographics." This series of questions was designed to help library managers understand the implications of the demographics of their local communities and to help guide development of library services and strategies that best reflect key changes in the local population.
- Next are "Demographic Profiles" for the 183 library jurisdictions. These are complemented by a series of reference profiles for the component cities of the multi-city jurisdictions and for the counties that have multiple jurisdictions.
- The final section, "Library Jurisdiction Rankings on Key Demographic Indicators," comprises a set of tables that rank the 183 library jurisdictions on key variables included in the profiles. These rankings provide a valuable perspective on the enormous demographic variation across the state and will allow library managers to identify other jurisdictions with similar characteristics.

California Demographic Overview

California is the country's most populous state and home to many diverse communities. As the accompanying demographic profiles of the library jurisdictions demonstrate, there is tremendous demographic variation across the state. This visual overview provides the general context for understanding how communities differ from each other and from the state overall.

Population Growth

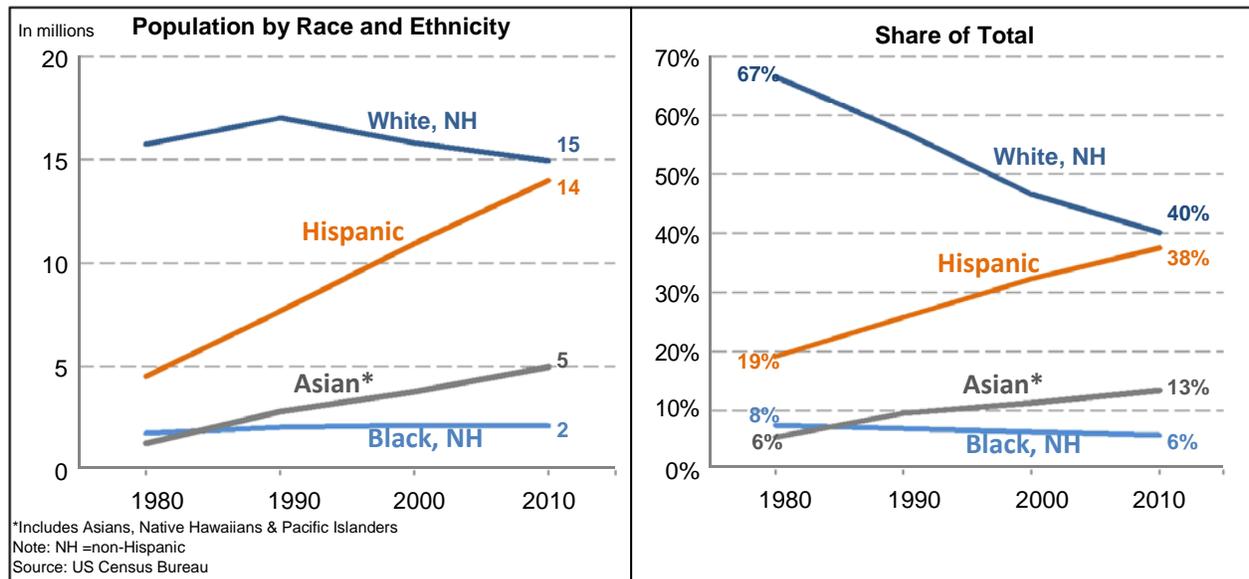

California's population increased by 10% over the past decade to 37.3 million. Overall population growth has slowed from the high-growth decades of the 1970s and 1980s, but growth from 2000 to 2010 still matched the overall US growth rate. California is by far the most populous state and accounts for 12% of total US population.

- Over the past decade, the Hispanic and Asian populations each grew about 30%, while the white, non-Hispanic population declined by 5% and the black population declined by 1%.
- Natural increase (births exceeding deaths) added 3.1 million to the total population from 2000 to 2010.
- International immigration added 1.7 million people, but was largely offset by domestic outmigration of 1.4 million. As a result, net migration totaled only 302,000 for the decade. Net foreign immigration declined 19% from the 1990s level, while net outmigration to other states increased by 15%.

Diversity

The population mix in California continues to shift, as the white, non-Hispanic population declines and the Hispanic population increases.

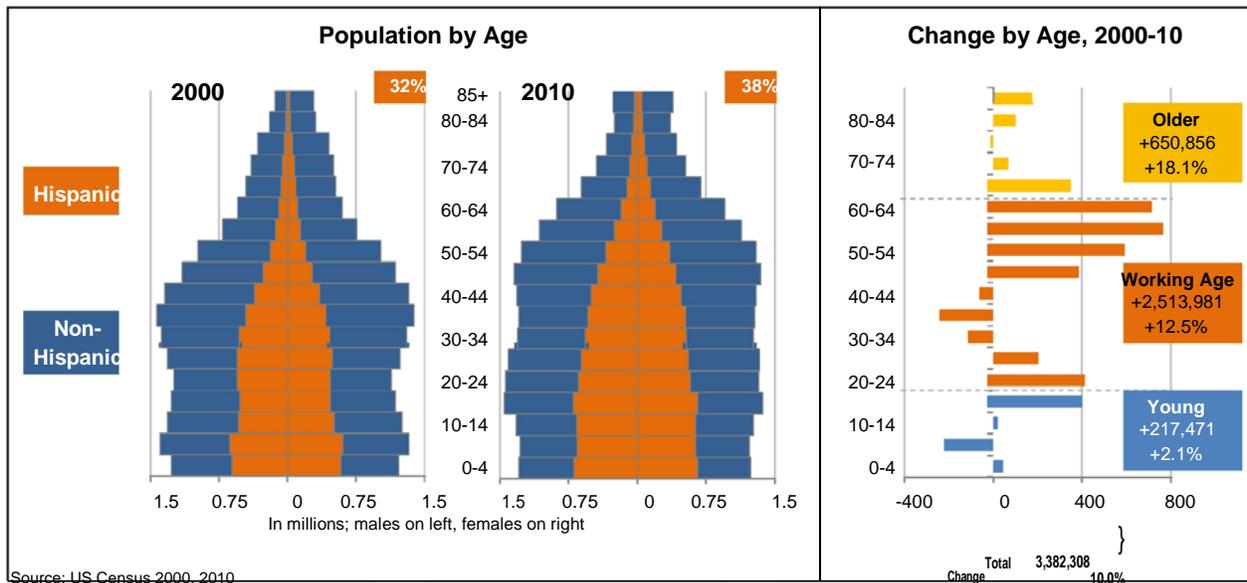

- The white, non-Hispanic population peaked at 17.0 million in 1990 and has since declined by 12%, falling to 15.0 million in 2010. In contrast, the Hispanic population increased from 7.7 million in 1990 to 14.0 million in 2010. Since 1990, the Hispanic share of California's total population has increased from 26% to 38%. The white, non-Hispanic share decreased from a majority 57% in 1990 to 47% in 2000 and 40% in 2010.
- Another shift in the population mix occurred as the Asian population grew from 2.7 million in 1990 to 4.8 million in 2010, increasing from 9% of California's total population to 13%.
- In contrast to high growth in the Hispanic and Asian populations, the black population in California increased by just 3% from the 1990 level to 2.2 million in 2010. The black share of California's total population declined from 7% in 1990 to less than 6% in 2010.

California's racial and ethnic mix differs sharply from the nation's overall population—California has larger shares of Hispanics and Asians than the country overall and smaller shares of blacks and white, non-Hispanics.

- California's population is 38% Hispanic, compared with 16% nationally; the share of white, non-Hispanics is 40%, compared with 64% nationally.
- The share of blacks in California has fallen to 6% of total compared with 12% nationally and the share of Asians has risen to 13%, compared with 5% nationally.

Age Structure

Although California remains relatively young compared with the rest of the country, over the last decade the population shifted toward the older age brackets, and the median age increased from 33 to 35.

- The two histograms above show how the population has aged. Each histogram is a snapshot of the age structure for that year, with the bars showing total population by five-year age bracket with children (age 0–4) at the bottom and old people (age 85 and older) at the top. Males are on the left and females on the right. The red segments show the Hispanic population in each age bracket.
- One notable change is the upward shift in the whole age structure as the upper age brackets became wider, while the lower brackets remained relatively static.
- Another notable shift is the increase in the Hispanic population. While California's total population increased by 10%, the Hispanic population increased by 28%. The Hispanic share increased from 32% to 38% of total. The Hispanic age structure also shifted upward over the past decade. As the size of the upper age brackets increased, the median age increased from 25 to 27.

The greatest absolute growth occurred in the working-age population, especially in the upper brackets from age 45 to 64. The fastest growth, however, occurred in the population age 65+.

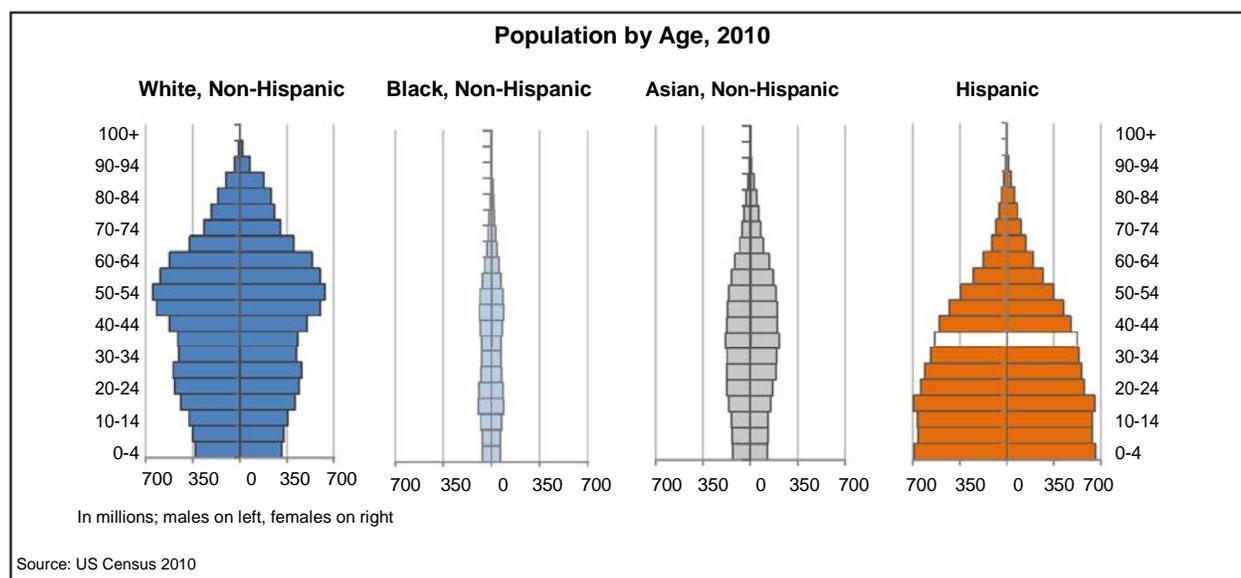

- The chart at the right shows the change in each bracket size over the ten-year period.
- Overall, the working-age population increased by 2.5 million (13%) from 2000 to 2010 and accounted for nearly three-quarters of the total population gain.
- In contrast, the population age 65+ grew at a faster rate, 18%, but added only 650,000, bringing the total population age 65+ to 4.2 million.
- The number of young people, those under 20, grew by only 2% adding just 217,000.

The age mix in California is similar to the country overall, except that California has a slightly smaller share of older people.

- In California the population age 65+ accounts for only 11% of the total population, compared with 13% nationally.
- Relative to the country, California has a slightly larger share of young people, 28% compared with 27%, as well as a slightly larger share of working age people, 61% compared with 60% nationally.

Age Structure by Race and Ethnicity

California's age structure differs significantly by race and ethnicity. The Hispanic population is relatively young and its age structure is "pyramid shaped" with a broad base of young people and a relatively narrow top. In contrast, the white, non-Hispanic population is much older and its age structure has a smaller base of young people and a higher concentration of older people. The combination of the youthful Hispanic population and the aging white, non-Hispanic population gives California a relatively even age distribution and makes California younger than the nation.

California's total population is aging but still growing.

- Median age is 35, up from 33 in 2000.
- Young people age 0 to 19 account for 28% of total population, down from 30% in 2000. The working-age population increased to 61% of total population and the population age 65+ remained at 11%.
- The number of young people increased by 2% over the past decade. Total population increased by 10%.

The white, non-Hispanic population is older and rapidly aging.

- Median age is 45, up from 40 in 2000.
- Just 19% of the population is under age 20, and 18% is age 65+.
- The number of young people declined by 19% over the past decade. Total population declined by 5%.

The black, non-Hispanic population is similar to the state, but aging faster.

- Median age is 35, up from 32 in 2000.
- The age mix is similar to that of the state: 28% of the population is under age 20, and 10% is age 65+.
- The number of young people declined by 17% over the past decade. Total population declined by 1%.

The Asian, non-Hispanic population is older, with a larger concentration in the working ages.

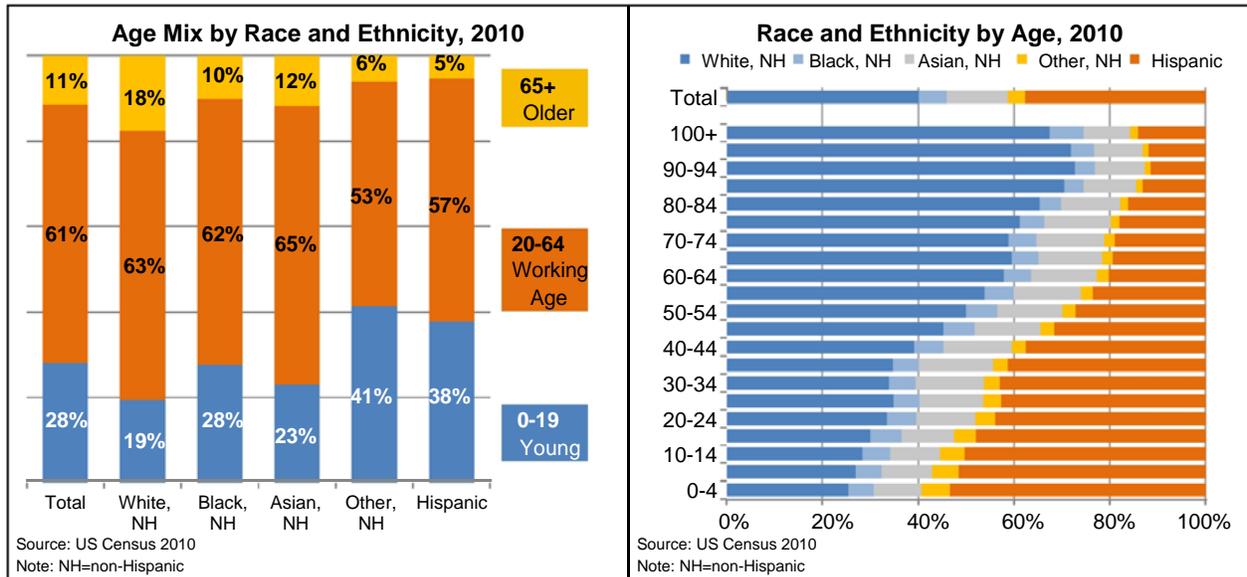

- Median age is 38, up from 34 in 2000.
- The young population accounts for 23% of the total, the working-age population for 65%, and the population age 65+ for 12% of the Asian population.
- The young population grew by 13% from 2000 to 2010. Total population grew by 31%.

The Hispanic population is much younger.

- Median age is just 27, up from 25 in 2000.
- People under 20 make up 38% of the population; only 5% of the population is age 65+.
- The young population grew by 19% over the past decade. Total population grew by 28%.

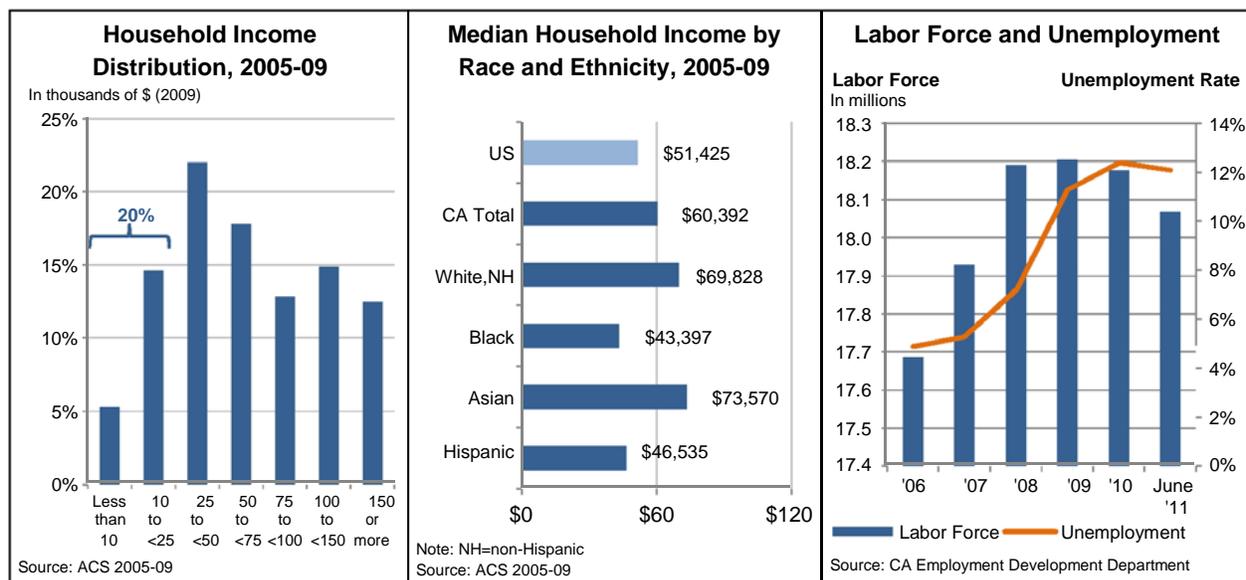

The Intersection of Age and Ethnicity

The Hispanic population in California is significantly younger than the white, non-Hispanic population and has a large share of young people, 38% compared with 19% for the white, non-Hispanic population and 28% for the state overall. Conversely, the white, non-Hispanic population has a higher share of older people, 18% compared with 5% for the Hispanic population and 11% for the state overall. As a result of these divergent age structures, the racial and ethnic composition of the various age groups differs significantly.

- The young population is majority Hispanic: 51% of the state's young population (age 0 to 19) is Hispanic and 28% is white, non-Hispanic. Ten percent is Asian and 6% is black.
- Conversely, the older population is predominantly white, non-Hispanic: of the population age 65+, 62% is white, non-Hispanic and 18% is Hispanic. Thirteen percent is Asian and 5% is black.

Income, Poverty, and Unemployment

The statewide median household income in 2005–09 was $60,392, about 17% higher than the US median income of $51,425. Income varies greatly across racial and ethnic groups, with median household income ranging from $43,397 for black households to $73,570 for Asian households.

- In 2005–09, California households were more heavily concentrated in the higher income brackets than households nationally: 12% of households in California had incomes of $150,000 compared with 8% nationwide.
- California also had proportionally fewer lower-income households: 20% of households in California had income of less than $25,000 compared with 24% nationwide.

The poverty rates in California are similar to nationwide rates, with 13% of individuals and 10% of families living below the federal poverty level.

- For individuals age 65+, the poverty rate in California is 8%, lower than the 10% nationwide rate.

California's unemployment rate rose steeply from 4.9% in 2006 to 12.4% in 2010. The June 2011 unemployment rate was 12.1%, well above the national rate of 9.3%.

(Note: The most recently released statewide data on household income from the Current Population Survey show that inflation-adjusted median income in California dropped by 5% from 2009 to 2010 and that the share of individuals with income below the federal poverty level increased to 16% and the share of children in poverty increased to 23%. These data provide useful information about statewide trends, but they are not comparable to the five-year ACS data used for the demographic profiles in this series.)

Education

Educational attainment in California varies significantly by race and ethnicity, particularly for high school completion.

One-fifth of adults in California have not completed high school.

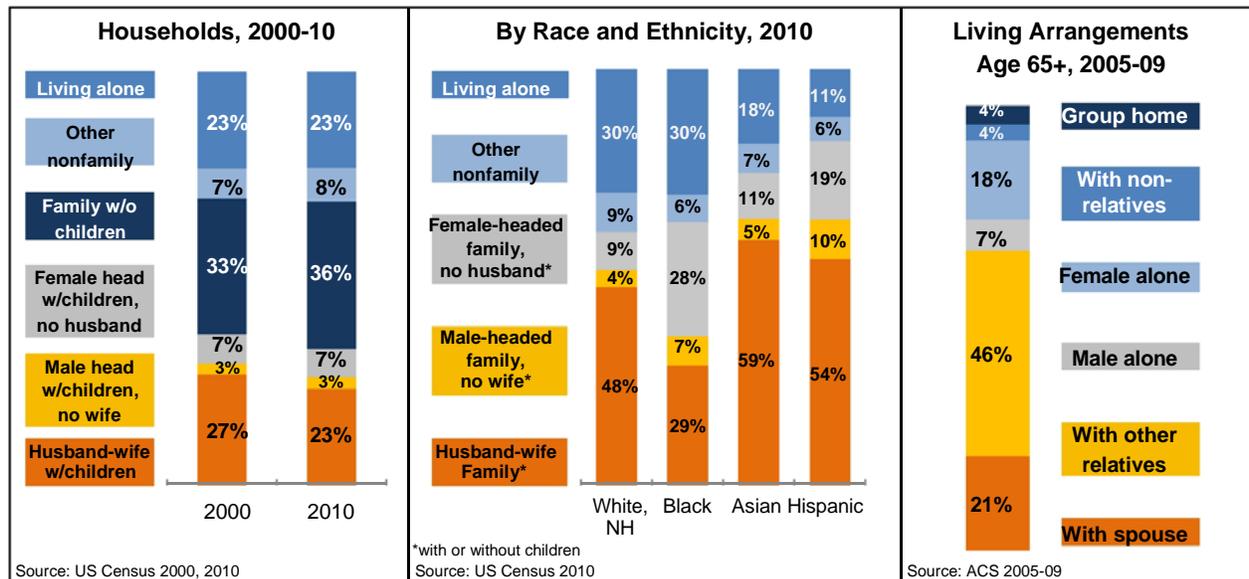

- Forty-four percent of Hispanic adults have not completed high school, compared with 14% of Asians and blacks. Just 7% of white, non-Hispanics have not completed high school.
- Although high school completion rates have increased since 2000, California still underperforms relative to the nation. Nationally, only 15% of adults have not completed high school, compared with 20% in California.

Statewide, 30% of adults have Bachelor's degrees or higher.

- Asians have the highest Bachelor's degree attainment at 48% and Hispanics have the lowest at 10%. Bachelor's degree attainment among black adults is 21% and among white, non-Hispanics it is 38%.
- Bachelor's degree attainment has increased since 2000 in both California and the US—to 30% in California and 28% nationwide.

Households

The share of family households has remained stable since 2000, accounting for 69% of all households, but the mix of family types has shifted.

- Statewide, the traditional family household—a married couple with children—has been on the decline, with the share decreasing from 27% to 23% of total.
- In contrast, family households without children have increased from 33% to 36% of total.

Nonfamily households have increased in number but still represent about 31% of all households, with single-person households still accounting for 23% of total.

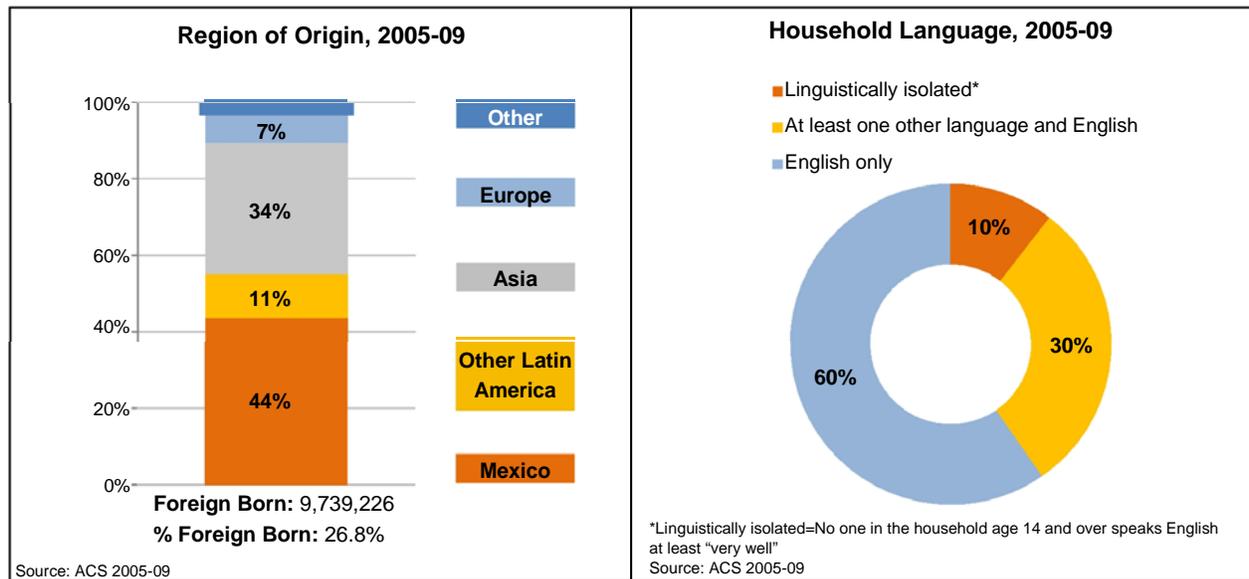

- Single person households are most common among blacks and white, non-Hispanics at 30% of households, and least common among Hispanics, at just 11% of households.

Husband-wife households, with or without children, account for almost half of all households.

- The share is highest among Asians, at 59%, and Hispanics, at 54%.

While most individuals age 65+ live with a spouse or other relatives, one quarter live alone, and most of those living alone are women.

Foreign Born

More than one quarter of California's population is foreign born.

- Mexico is the most common country of origin, accounting for 44% of the immigrants. Another 11% come from other Latin American countries and 34% come from Asia. Only 7% come from Europe.
- With nearly 10 million immigrants, California accounts for 26% of the nation's foreign-born population, more than any other state.
- International immigration has declined over the last decade. Net international immigration totaled 2.1 million during the 1990s, but fell to 1.7 million from 2000 to 2010.

Across California, 10% of all households are linguistically isolated, meaning that no one in the household age 14 or older can speak English at least "very well." In addition, 30% of all households speak at least one other language besides English.

Drawing Implications from the Demographics: Questions to Address

The Demographic Profiles in this report include charts and data tables that illustrate powerful demographic changes already underway in communities throughout California. Understanding these changes and evaluating how they might unfold will be critical for developing effective library services that meet the changing needs of the local areas. Answering the questions outlined below will help guide development of strategies that reflect the changing demographics.

Population Growth

California's population increased by 10% over the past decade. The Hispanic and Asian populations each grew by about 30%. The white, non-Hispanic population declined by 5% and the black population declined by 1%. At the same time, the older age groups grew faster than the young population. Overall, the population has become more Hispanic as well as older.

- How has growth in your community differed from the statewide pattern? Which age groups or racial and ethnic groups have had the largest gains or losses?
- What factors have contributed to the growth or decline of your community's population in the last decade? What factors might influence future population gains or losses?
- How, if at all, were your library services different in 1990, 2000, and 2010?
- How have your library users changed from 1990 to 2000 and 2000 to 2010?
- How can your library change its services to reflect the population shifts that have occurred? In particular, what changes in services or operations might you consider in light of the increase or decrease in particular age groups or racial and ethnic groups?
- Do nearby communities face similar or different demographic shifts? Might there be opportunities to share services or offer complementary services?

Diversity: Racial and Ethnic Mix

The population mix in California continues to shift. Over the past ten years, the white, non-Hispanic population declined from 47% to 40% of total, while the Hispanic population increased from 32% to 38%. The Asian share of total population increased from 11% to 13% while the black share remained at 6%.

- What are the racial and ethnic characteristics of your actual user groups and do they correspond with the racial and ethnic composition of your community?
- What services might be added or adapted to serve specific racial and ethnic groups?

Age Structure

Over the last decade, California's overall age structure has shifted toward older brackets. In California overall, the School Age population (ages 6 to 10) decreased by 8% while the number of Teens (ages 14 to 18) increased by 13%. The Adult population (ages 33 to 45) decreased by 5%, while the Midlife Adult population (ages 46 to 64) increased by 36%. The population age 65+ increased by 18%, with the fastest growth occurring in the population age 85 and older.

- Did your community follow a similar pattern? If not, what pattern occurred in your community?
- Which age groups grew or declined the most in your community over the past ten years? Were these groups among your major users?
- What services might be added to serve the needs of specific age groups? What additional services might be needed as the baby boomers age and swell the population age 65+?

Aging and Ethnicity

The Hispanic population in California is significantly younger than the white, non-Hispanic population. The Hispanic age structure is "pyramid shaped" with a broad base of young people and a relatively narrow top (38% of the population is 0 to 19 and only 5% is age 65+). In contrast, the age structure of the white, non-Hispanic population is more cube-like and has a smaller base of young people and a higher concentration of people in the upper age brackets than the Hispanic population (Only 19% of the white, non-Hispanic population is age 0 to 19, and another 18% is age 65+). As a result, 51% of the state's young population is Hispanic and only 28% is white, non-Hispanic. Conversely, the upper age brackets are predominantly white, non-Hispanic. Of the population age 65+, only 18% is Hispanic, while 62% is white, non-Hispanic.

- How does the age structure in your community differ by race and ethnicity? Which if any age groups are predominantly Hispanic? Predominantly white, non-Hispanic?
- What services could be added or modified to reflect the ethnic composition of various age groups?

Income

The statewide median household income is $60,000. Income varies greatly across racial and ethnic groups, with median household income ranging from $43,000 for black households to $74,000 for Asian households. Twelve percent of all households have incomes of $150,000 or higher, while 20% have incomes of less than $25,000.

- Is income inequality a significant issue in your area? How does median household income in your community differ across racial and ethnic groups? What share of your community has household income of $150,000 or more? What share has household income of less than $25,000, or less than $10,000?
- How can your library help address the needs of low-income households?
- How can your library reach households that could lend financial support to the library, including recruiting individuals to join library leadership teams?

Unemployment

California's unemployment rose steeply from 4.9% in 2006 to 12.4% in 2010. The June 2011 unemployment rate was 12.1%, well above the national rate of 9.3%.

- Based on the level of unemployment in your community, what types of job search resources can your library provide? What services might be provided to older people seeking re-entry into the workforce?
- Who else in your community is offering such services or resources? Is collaboration feasible? Can local or nearby employers be involved?

Education

One-fifth of adults in California have not completed high school. Among Hispanic adults, 44% have not completed high school compared with 14% of Asians and blacks. College completion also varies by race and ethnicity: 48% of Asian adults have a Bachelor's degree compared with just 10% of Hispanics.

- Which groups in your community are most at risk of low educational attainment? What library services could support educational attainment for the various at-risk groups?
- What types of partnerships should your library consider in order to help teenagers and adults complete their educations?

Households

Statewide, the traditional family household—a married couple with children—has been on the decline. In contrast, the share of family households without children has increased. While most individuals age 65+ live with a spouse or other relatives, one quarter live alone, and most of those living alone are women.

- Which household types are most common in your community?
- What additional services or changes might be implemented to accommodate the living arrangements most prevalent in your community?
- How might programs differ for families with and without children and for older people living alone?

Foreign Born

More than one quarter of California's population is foreign born. Mexico is the country of origin for 44% of the immigrants; another 11% of immigrants came from other Latin American countries, and a third of the immigrants came from Asia.

- What are the major countries of origin for the immigrants in your community?
- Does your library offer services to help immigrants participate more fully in the community? Which of these services do you think are useful?
- What services do you think your library could offer that would target the needs of the specific immigrant groups reflected in your demographics?

Language

Across California, 10% of all households are linguistically isolated, meaning that no one in the household age 14 or older can speak English at least "very well." In addition, 30% of all households speak at least one other language besides English.

- How can your library better assist people who are linguistically isolated? What collaborations might be feasible?
- Does your library have bilingual staff on hand to assist non-English speakers, as well as library materials in languages other than English? Do your staff and collections reflect your community's demographics?
