Rare documents and artifacts from the Civil War era on display at the State Library through September

SACRAMENTO – A “Dixie First Reader” textbook for school children in Southern states, tintypes and medals of Union soldiers, and the iconic 1863 edition of the Vicksburg Daily Citizen printed on wallpaper are just a few of the unique items on display at the California State Library in its exhibit of Civil War era artifacts and archival pieces. The exhibit has been extended through the month of September.

Over 60 items from the library's collection, including books, photos, pamphlets, and a California soldier's diary, can be viewed in the library's lobby, open weekdays from 8 to 5. The library is located at 900 N Street in Sacramento, a block from the State Capitol.

California ballots for the presidential elections of 1860 and 1864 are also on display. Unlike today's ballots, voters dropped colorful party tickets, complete with slogans like “Rally around the Flag, Boys,” into a ballot box. There is also a roster of the “California 100” volunteers who fought for the Union on Eastern battlegrounds, with check marks next to the names of the war dead.

Tintype, a relatively new photography process at the time, became popular during the war years. The library has on display two tintypes of Union soldiers, one of Charles Gladding of Illinois. Gladding's medal and pin denoting his service at the fall of Vicksburg on July 4, 1863 are also on view. After the war, Gladding moved to Lincoln, California and formed the Gladding McBean ceramics company with Peter McGill McBean. The company's elegant terra cotta columns and architectural ornamentation can be seen on many buildings throughout the state, including the California State Library and Courts Building.

Visitors will be able to see the famous “wallpaper edition” of the Vicksburg, Mississippi newspaper. Paper was scarce in the Confederate states, and the publisher was using the back of wallpaper instead. The edition was set for printing on July 2, 1863, two days before the city fell to the Union, but the publisher fled. Union soldiers printed the paper on July 4, with an added note that began, “Two days bring about great changes. The banner of the Union floats over Vicksburg.”

About the California State Library: Founded in 1850, the California State Library has for 162 years been the central reference and research library for the Governor's office, legislature, state employees, and the general public. The State Library administers federal and state grants for programs in historical preservation, library construction, civil liberties education, literacy, volunteering, and broadband connectivity in public libraries.
